It goes without saying that the mass media tell lies. They lied about Iraq in the lead-up to a war that, in total, killed over two million people. They lied about Libya; they are lying about Syria. They lie about vaccines and intentionally try to sell parents the idea of purposefully injecting their children with mercury. Their lies have a single purpose – to serve those special interests that hand them their talking points.

Now the mass media are lying about gun violence. The New York Times wrote a particularly outrageous piece titled “In Gun Debate, a Misguided Focus on Mental Illness,” where a “medical doctor” is given space to willfully bend statistics to make the case for banning guns, period.

Unfortunately for this “medical doctor” who claims that the vast majority of the mentally ill do not commit violent acts, the last several mass shootings in the U. S. were committed by mentally ill individuals, all confirmed to be on psychotropic medication. Shooter Adam Lanza was said by relatives to be on Fanapt (Iloperidone) – an anti-psychotic prescribed for people suffering from schizophrenia.

The U. S. National Institute of Health describes schizophrenia in its Iloperidone drug profile as:

...a mental illness that causes disturbed or unusual thinking, loss of interest in life, and strong or inappropriate emotions). Iloperidone is in a class of medications called atypical antipsychotics. It works by changing the activity of certain natural substances in the brain.

Clearly a suicidal mass killer who targets little children is a mentally unhinged individual who has “lost interest in life” and was directed by “strong or inappropriate emotions.”

Like Lanza, the Aurora, Colorado, theater shooter was also on prescription medication – Vicodin (Hydrocodone). Before that, the Tucson Arizona shooter, Jared Loughner, was not only mentally ill but spent most of his trial on heavy medication. Likewise, the Fort Hood shooter, Major Nidal Malik Hasan, had shoe boxes stuffed with prescription medications he had prescribed for himself as a U. S. Army psychiatrist.

There are hundreds of millions of guns in America, with millions of Americans responsibly owning and using firearms every day. The common denominator amongst mass killers is not “guns,” but

HERE’S WHAT WAS IGNORED OR MISREPORTED ELSEWHERE:

Ignores ban, visits Iran

A RUSSIAN destroyer has docked at the Bandar Abbas Port in southern Iran. That country’s Press TV reported December 19: “Marshal Shaposhnikov, a Russian Udaloy class destroyer, has docked at this port with the aim of strengthening military ties between Iran and Russia,” Vice-Admiral Hossein Azad said. The report didn’t give the exact purpose of the visit, or how long the ship was expected to remain in port, but it unambiguously gave the U. S. and Israel to understand: “If you attack Iran, you will have to contend with Russia militarily.”

USA Today ran its online poll “Does the Second Amendment give individuals the right to bear arms?” before and the overwhelming response was that the 2nd Amendment does guarantee individuals the right to bear arms. They didn’t like that response, so now they are running the identical poll again – and receiving once more the exact same result.

PAMELA GELLER, who runs the blog Atlas Shrugs, heads up Stop Islamization of America and the American Freedom Defense Initiative, had inflammatory ads put up in fifty subway stations at a cost of over $10,000. Those ads picture the World Trade Center burning on September 11 and quote a Qu’ran verse tying the religion of Islam to the terrorist attacks. Just who is paying for Geller’s antics?

AMERICANS remain mostly in the dark about who’s doing what to whom in the Mideast, where the actual figures show 1,096 Israelis and at least 6,568 Palestinians killed since September 29, 2000. – ifamericansknew.org

“Be assured that if this new provision [the 14th Amendment] be engrafted in the Constitution, it will, in time, change the entire structure and texture of our government, and sweep away all the guarantees of safety devised and provided by our patriotic Sires of the Revolution.” – Orville Browning Sec. of the Interior (1867)

ASPIRIN is to be heavily taxed under Obamacare. As the official explanation, they are white and they work. No other reason was given.

HEZBOLLAH chief Hassan Nasrallah warned Al-Qaeda on Dec. 23 that it had been tricked into fighting in Syria, and that the rebellion would not be able to topple the regime of President Bashar al-Assad militarily. “The Americans, Europeans and some governments in the Arab and Muslim world have set a trap for you in Syria,” the head of Lebanon’s most powerful military force said.

AMERICANS aren’t waiting for a long discussion on guns. “We have never seen anything like this,” Larry Hyatt, owner of a North Carolina shop, told ABC News. “We have the Christmas business and hunting season business; now the political business.”

IN GREECE, the pathetic attempt to pin chaos created by bankers and their illegal immigration agenda on the rising right-wing Golden Dawn movement has merely called attention to a treacherous plan for Zionist would-be world rule.

THE EXPORT-IMPORT Bank of China (Eximbank) will grant Belarus over $600 million in preferential loans towards the implementation of national infrastructural projects, the Belarusian government said on December 20.

Flag banned by “tolerance”

By Michael southernnationalist.com

Dolores High school in Cortez, Colorado, has banned the Confederate flag and forced “tolerance” indoctrination upon students. Shannon Livick covers the story for The Cortez Journal in a news piece which reads like anti-Southern propaganda. Despite the obvious bias of the article, a couple of interesting things are noted in it. For one, Confederate flags are increasingly popular with students in the small town in rural Colorado. For another, there is a clear disconnect between the students and the administrators at Dolores. In her piece, Livick notes the anti-White attitudes and agenda of those administrators and contrasts them with the “rebellious” students at the school. One of those students painted a Confederate flag on the back of his truck and now has to park off of school grounds because of the policies promoted by Dolores School District Superintendent Scott Cooper. Livick writes:

“Cooper sent out a school-wide memo last week to all staff banning the display of the Confederate flag and ‘any other symbols that represent and promote hate crimes’ on school grounds.

“‘Hate crimes are defined by State law as one that involves threats, harassment or physical harm and is motivated by prejudice against someone’s race, color, religion, national origin, ethnicity, sexual orientation or physical or mental disability, and will not be tolerated,’ Cooper wrote in the memo. ‘I want everyone to feel safe in our schools.’

“‘Anything that promotes hate crimes is not allowed,’ Cooper said.”

Livick then goes on to give readers a short summary of the history of the Confederate flag from an anti-Southern perspective:

“The Confederate flag, also known as the rebel flag, has been surrounded in controversy over the years. Its history stretches back to the American Civil War, fought from 1861 to 1865 between the Northern States and the Southern slave States. The war’s origin was over slavery. The war was also the deadliest war in American history with 620,000 individuals killed.”

Cooper notes that the Confederate flag is increasingly popular with students. He then rattles off some mindless clichés that sound as if they were written by Mark Potok at the Southern Poverty Law Center:

“Cooper said he has seen a rise in the flag being displayed recently, on clothing, accessories and book covers.

“‘If the flag is being used for education, it is fine,’ Cooper said. ‘But it’s just too close to a history of racism.’

“Cooper continued that there isn’t a direct connection between the hate crime itself and the Confederate flag and added that the flag has been banned in some Southern U. S. high schools.

“‘I have learned from the past,’ Cooper said of the incident. ‘That you can’t ignore this type of activity. Dolores is too great to hate.’”

Following those less than helpful talking points from Cooper, Livick goes on to quote from a letter sent out by Dolores High School Principal Brandon Thurston about the alleged mass epidemic of “hate crimes” in the United States. In doing so Thurston manages to use the word “hate” in ways that would surely delight Potok and company. In one short paragraph he uses “hate crimes,” “hate-motivated behavior,” “hate violence” and “hate groups.”

Thurston also details the sort of Left-wing, anti-White indoctrination that students in Dolores must endure:

“In addition to banning symbols of hate, the instruction of tolerance is a critical component of character education delivered through our Home Room and Career Advisory classes. Students will be involved in critical thinking exercises to identify various manifestations of hate throughout history and stereotyping that occurs in their own lives, in the media, literature, music, movies and elsewhere. Students will also be learning what they can do to reduce incidents of intolerance and that their choices and actions can make a difference.”

It is clear that the agenda at Dolores High School has less to do with educating students about math, science, history, etc. and more to do about instilling a certain political and social view in their minds. The indoctrination appears not to be working though, given Cooper’s acknowledgement of the rising popularity of Confederate symbols. The final part of the article also tells the story of a young man who has painted a Confederate flag on the back of his truck and now has to park off of school property due to the political agenda of Cooper, Thurston and others like them.

Hobby Lobby will take HHS mandate to Supreme Court

By Steven Ertelt
lifeneews.com

After a federal court denied a request to temporarily stop enforcement of the abortion pill mandate against its Christian operated business, Hobby Lobby will take its lawsuit to the Supreme Court.

On December 20, a federal appeals court ruled the Obama administration can force the Christian-owned-and-operated business to obey the HHS mandate that compels it to pay for birth control and drugs that may cause abortions for its employees.

Kyle Duncan, General Counsel for the Becket Fund for Religious Liberty, says the family that runs Hobby Lobby is upset that the appeals court didn’t support its case against the HHS mandate, which it says would force the company to provide the “morning-after pill” and “week-after pill” in its health insurance plan or face crippling fines up to $1.3 million per day.

“The Green family is disappointed with this ruling,” said Duncan. “They simply asked for a temporary halt to the mandate while their appeal goes forward, and now they must seek relief from the U. S. Supreme Court. The Greens will continue to appeal their case as the unconstitutional mandate infringes their right to earn a living while remaining true to their faith.”

Principles simply don’t apply

He said the 10th Circuit judges denied the motion calling the religious burden to the Green family “indirect and attenuated.”

“It is by God’s grace and provision that Hobby Lobby has endured,” said David Green, founder/CEO. “Therefore we seek to honor God by operating the company in a manner consistent with Biblical principles.”

Earlier, a different federal appeals court reinstated two of the top legal challenges to the mandate. The D. C. Circuit Court of Appeals handed Wheaton College and Belmont Abbey College a major victory in their challenges to the HHS mandate. Previously, two lower courts had dismissed their lawsuits as premature because the Obama administration is expected to revise the mandate in 2013. However, the appellate court reinstated those cases.

Your “representatives” – forbidden by the Southern Puberty Lechery Center, a federal Affirmative Action Apparatchik and those new voting machines to display such reminders in a building full of judges, lawyers and politicians – have banished the Ten Commandments from Alabama’s Supreme Court now for 112 months.

Homo Americanus

By Chris DeHuff
firstfreedom.net

Homo Americanus, a book by Tomislav Sunic, is excellent. The author is a former professor with a doctorate in political science, though this book also deals with sociological issues.

Mr. Sunic is also a former diplomat, and obviously well traveled. In examining the postmodern age and the peecee dogma that has come to dominate our civilization, one gets the impression that the author knows whereof he speaks; his erudition and breadth of knowledge is balanced with an unflinching commitment to get at the truth of the matter. Keep that dictionary handy and your thinking cap on, as this book may challenge – but you will be better for the experience.

Notions

The first couple of chapters focus on Americanism, both how we see it ourselves and how the rest of the world views us. Most notable in this regard, Americans in general seem to have this idealized notion that we can do no wrong, that American hegemony is somehow justifiable because we are morally incorruptible and above reproach, and to hell with anyone who says different; all while we spread “democracy” through force (an oxymoron), and the end necessarily justifies the means.

The rest of the world sees us for what we are – egotistic, arrogant and belligerent – but we dismiss such concerns. The second chapter specifically analyses the differences between Homo Americanus and Homo Sovieticus, essentially by-products of the post-WW2 era, and shows how the former is more thoroughly brainwashed by this “soft totalitarianism” here at home than ever the latter could be similarly affected by State terror (during the Cold War, Communist Russia and our Democratic America pursued essentially the same end-game, though through different means); in fact, the brutality of communism effectively delegitimized it in the eyes of most Eastern Europeans, many of whom scoffed at it behind closed doors.

America’s soft totalitarianism secures

PBNKDEFF; Postbank Karlsruhe; note down “Rechtskampf” and please indicate the exact sender.

My wife will let me know, and she will acknowledge receipt by private letter or card. Do not mention the amount of money in the mail to me. The “system” should not its legitimacy through the use of meta-language, that is, language about language, and elite control of academia and media; basically they define the parameters of public discourse, redefining words to suit their agenda, lambasting opponents with “buzzwords” instead of rational arguments and marginalizing or simply ignoring most dissenters. In this fashion the myths of equality and perpetual progress have become dogma, and most Americans – that is, Whites – actually believe them, even to the point of participating actively in their own dispossession.

Chapter three essays the cult of political correctness – its origins in post-WW2 Europe and America’s role in refining it. Initially, political correctness was the anti-fascism/anti-racism of the Allied powers at the conclusion of the war, imposed on the Germans through terror and re-education programs, now law of the land throughout Europe. In America we’ve not graduated to physical repression, but aren’t far off; already we have laws against “hate crimes” of all sorts, which the courts can see only heterosexual White males committing.

Political correctness is the legitimization of the liberal agenda – multiculturalism, egalitarianism, globalism and the Holocaust as religion – all of which are sacrosanct and cannot be openly challenged without vilification. We find its origins in the Marxian oriented Frankfurt school, Boasian anthropology and Freudian psychoanalysis. Mr. Sunic examines this issue in depth.

Chapters four and five bravely address the issue of biblical fundamentalism, how it has shaped American culture in general along with domestic and foreign policy in particular. I’m sure many would prefer to sidestep this issue, but that’s all the more reason to address it, for the truth fears no investigation. Most people fail to realize how profoundly Judeo-Christianity has shaped our culture, assuming that because “separation of Church and State” is made clear in our constitution it is therefore a non-issue – which is naïve in the extreme. The fact is, every significant event in America’s history has been imbued with some form of Christian morality from revolutionary times through the Civil War, two World Wars and every other war of the 20th century, the Civil Rights movement be given supporter addresses this way.

What doesn’t kill me makes me stronger! So, with this in mind, my best comradely greetings and loyalty to our kin and people.

I wish everyone a very good year of 2013 full of success and the best health possible.

Günter Deckert

and all additional culture-distorting drives of the last 60-plus years. From its inception, Judeo-Christianity has proven very effective as a weapon against Western civilization.

Ultimatums

In America, Christian influence dates back to the very beginning, having started with the hyper-moralist Puritans of New England and permeating our culture ever since. The author points out how it is this hyper-moralism that has led to arrogance, the idea that we are morally incorruptible and therefore justified in imposing our values on the rest of the world; also, the idea of “chosen-ness” – our identification with Israel and the Jewish people – right out of the Old Testament! Whether you’re a Christian or not, the idea that America’s destiny is somehow tied to Israel and that we have some historical imperative to guard/support Israel’s interests even above our own and regardless of consequences is bare bones biblical fundamentalism. We cannot extricate ourselves from this fiasco in the Middle East before coming to terms with the Judeo-Christian influence on our foreign policy and actively repudiating it. Judeo-Christianity has us bogged down with its egalitarian and universalistic cult; we can’t hope to rationally address any of the issues pertinent to Western civilization’s survival when the prevailing dogma tacitly if not overtly approves of everything that is ripping our world apart. From a racistist perspective, Judeo-Christianity inevitably spells doom; that doesn’t mean Christians can’t be racistists, only that, taking all this to its logical conclusion, it’s a pan-racial, universalistic recipe for world-governance. Such is not conducive to the pursuit of White racial survival.

The last chapters cover postmodernism, its meaning for America and Western civilization in general and the White race in particular. Our situation is dire, but the future doesn’t lack possibilities. This is a good book; it brings some much needed clarity to a very complex subject, and does so without becoming pedantic or overly technical. I highly recommend it.

FBI turning over stones with Israelis underneath

By Scott DaVault
whatreallyhappened.com

On November 10th, the New York Times reported that America was cracking down on terrorism by toughening policies for immigration from Arab countries, hinting that people entering from any of those countries are suspect in our government's eyes. The full list is: Afghanistan, Algeria, Bahrain, Djibouti, Egypt, Eritrea, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Lebanon, Libya, Malaysia, Morocco, Oman, Pakistan, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, Somalia, Sudan, Syria, Tunisia, Turkey, the United Arab Emirates and Yemen.

Although sixty Israelis have been taken into custody, it didn't make the list. Considering that the U. S. has stated that we are not involved in a "holy war," it is odd that we've been so lopsided with our immigration policy, especially since at least sixty Israelis have been detained in response to the September 11th attacks.

The Israeli's are not Arabs pretending to be Jewish, as multiple stories have been printed in the Jerusalem Post demanding their release. What is known is that most of them are in their early twenties, and fresh out of the Israeli military. Any speculation as to their possible involvement with Israel's Mossad would be relatively groundless, but the organizations they've been linked to in the U. S. are notorious for being both clandestine and harmful to our citizens.

A Plantation, Florida, police officer working closely with the FBI stated in a phone interview that at least five moving companies are currently under investigation. With nationwide allegations of incredible amounts of moving fraud and extortion by Israelis in the months before the September 11th attacks, it is no surprise that the government has taken interest. Unfortunately, the interest seems to be fleeting when faced with the lawyers and ambassadors that Israel has on its side. The young men from Urban Moving Systems who were detained after jumping up and down and laughing while taking pictures of the burning World Trade Center have already been deported, much to the chagrin of Rick Martin. Martin of Millennium Marketplace contracted New York-based Urban Moving Systems to move his company only to have lost everything but the company's name. All of his company's property, including its line of apparel and company records, was last seen on an Urban Moving truck, and the

The self-proclaimed "neoconservative" Zionists hiding behind two Bushes, and today their latest front man, couldn't just go bombing "regime changes" for similar puppet governments paying tribute to that little rogue State of expansionist Israel. Americans are fickle. They needed a new Pearl Harbor.

FBI refuses to give him any information as to their possible whereabouts according to the PRNewswire.

Another detail that should not be overlooked is that over a dozen computer hard drives were removed from Urban Moving Systems, according to Associated Press. Michael Maffucci, an owner of a New York-based independent moving company and a member of the Long Island Moving and Storage Association, stated that it is highly unlikely that that many computers would be needed to keep track of a small fleet of trucks. It is obvious that they were not used to operate the company's website, which is still operational though the phone numbers listed on it are not. It is a closed shop that the FBI is evading answering questions about.

Fast movers

Questions about the moving companies which all appear to be under Israeli ownership are overshadowed at the moment by questions of Bin Laden's whereabouts. It is understandable that the government would like to keep it that way. From collected written testimonials by defrauded customers and newspaper articles, a profile of those Israelis employed at the moving companies and another company, Quality Sales, Inc., has been established.

The testimonials, added to statements from currently detained Israelis, do not paint a pretty picture. After completing their national duty of serving in Israeli's army, the young men and women tour the world. Some end up here in the U. S. where a network set up in Miami affords them apartments and jobs in moving companies during the warmer seasons. As the weather gets colder and the Christmas season comes around, they are given different jobs at America's malls selling products in temporary kiosks. This holiday season, the product of choice is the Zoom Copter, a flying toy that sells on the internet for approximately five dollars on Yahoo and some online hobby stores. Although the copters are available in three styles, the kiosks are only selling red and white copters, and green versions with "U. S. Army" printed on the side. The third style, a black helicopter, is not displayed at the malls.

2013 and still investigating

The November 22nd Washington Post ran an article titled "60 Israelis on Tourist Visas Detained Since Sept. 11," specifically stating that employees of Quality Sales, Inc., in Toledo, Ohio, and other Israelis in the U. S. have been detained in relation to our government's ongoing terrorism probe. Officials were tipped off to the existence of the foreigners by vigilant citizens who spied the suspicious characters living together in neighborhood apartment buildings. The Cleveland/Toledo detainees are "the subject of an ongoing criminal investigation into an individual or company who had agreed to pay living and travel expenses," according to FBI agents quoted by the Washington Post.

At the time the Washington Post article was written, all but two of the eleven employees of Quality Sales were released on bond. The remaining two are held in connection with the attacks, according to the Post. The Post also gives mention to David Leopold, a Toledo immigration lawyer representing the eleven Israelis and also Thomas Dean, the lawyer for Quality Sales in Miami. The Post fails to mention that Thomas Dean is solely an immigration lawyer as evidenced by his website, american-immigration.com. Quality Sales, Inc., listing its Miami address as only a post office box across the street from Miami-Dade Community College, might be needing more than just immigration lawyers.

Not ours

At the time this article was written, Quality Sales was also misusing another Miami company's name by placing a laminated sign presenting the name "MAGIFF" on a Quality Sales mall cart in the Cincinnati area. Mario Vargas of Magiff Nails was surprised by this news, stating that his company specializes in men and women's beauty products and does not offer Zoom Copters in their line of products. Vargas added that Magiff used to have a kiosk in the Tri-County mall, but does not do business there any longer. Vargas' statement is in direct conflict with the employee of the kiosk who said that he was under the management of Magiff. An empty kiosk in another part of the same mall displayed the name Magiff in permanent lettering on the cart and backs up Vargas' claim.

Last year, in the same mall, Quality Sales sold flying toys as well as operating another stand during the holidays that offered what appeared to be original paintings but were actually canvas transfers. In addition to selling the paintings in the malls, individual Israelis would visit businesses door-to-door selling the same paintings at over $200 apiece, a blatant ripoff of any buyers. Door-to-door Israeli art dealers of an identical nature were also spotted in the St. Louis area.

What can be said for sure at this time is that these men all seem to be organized out of the Miami area and are involved in less than legitimate businesses. From the actions of the Israelis who were illegally employed by Urban Moving who joked while two of our tallest buildings burned, we can be sure that their sentiments toward Americans are less than compassionate. The money and property stolen by the moving companies added to the large profits made from selling fake art could have easily funded the terrorism witnessed on September 11th.

Stonewalling

While we can be sure that the Israelis were all trained in the military, we do not know whether any of them have specific knowledge pertaining to flying aircraft or bomb making. The FBI, it is known, is investigating these Israelis because, after seeing what has happened to two of the tallest buildings in the United States, we've learned that what we don't know can hurt us. The actual identity of Mohammed Atta may never be known, since the planes that tore into Manhattan surely disintegrated all passengers. Until details as to where the cash he used to pay for his Pontiac Firebird is discovered and made public, it is wisest to follow the lead of the Justice Department's spokesperson Dan Nelson and leave "no stone unturned."

Media ignored this story

By John Penman
pressofatlanticcity.com

Coverage of the tragedy in Connecticut has basically put on the back burner the shooting in the Clackamas Town Center mall in Portland, Ore., a few days earlier. A key detail in the Clackamas shooting was severely under-reported, i.e., that a legally armed civilian with a concealed-carry permit had confronted that shooter.

A 22-year-old off-duty security guard named Nick Meli was in the Clackamas mall at the time with a friend and her baby. He was carrying his licensed 40-caliber Glock 22. When he heard the shots, he ran toward them and confronted the shooter. He didn't fire but took aim at the shooter.

The shooter saw this, retreated and then shot himself in the head. Had this legally armed citizen not been there to confront the killer, who knows how many lives would have been lost? Here's a perfect example of an armed private citizen coming to the rescue of others in danger.

I find it troubling and highly suspicious that this important detail of the Clackamas mall shooting was kept quiet by most, if not all, of the mainstream media. I bet most of you were unaware of this until now.

Could it be that an armed citizen stopping a violent criminal somehow doesn't fit into the mainstream media's attitude that guns and gun owners are all bad? You be the judge.

Doctors sans alternatives

Reconstruction at age 145 plods on, determined that what failed to work for seventy-five years in the Soviet Union MUST succeed here in the USSA. Doctor and hospital bed shortages be damned! Ahead!

Never too precise about keeping books exactly as the feds desired or for any other interest than my own business, some years back summoned to explain why I wasn’t giving Uncle Sugar sufficient information concerning income and expenses, the IRS learned that it would be OK should one of their employees wish to sit in on whatever transpired in my office while not blocking traffic there, where the balance sheet aimed at sound decision making – cutting useless expenditures – not publishing free advice for tax farmers.

In retirement, this old tightwad rebel got $646 a month social obscurity. Over a year ago Healthspring, a communist healthcare facilitator in cahoots with the feds, began

Reconstruction war on Syria

By Shamus Cooke
countercurrents.org

The administration has declared war on Syria, even if it isn’t “official.” Consider the facts, all of them acts of war: The U. S. now recognizes a group of Syrian exiles to be the official government of Syria; the U. S. is providing direct support for rebels attacking the government; the U. S. has coordinated with NATO to place advanced missile systems – and 400 U. S. troops – on Syria’s border with Turkey; Obama has drawn a “red line” that, if Syria crosses, would result in U. S. direct military intervention. If any other country made similar moves toward the U. S., there would be no question that war had been declared.

All the steps that led to the Iraq war are being repeated. Obama has assembled a Bush-style international “coalition of the willing” nations ready to topple the Syrian government; 130 countries have put their names on paper in support of toppling the Assad government.

Extortion by whatever name

In reality, however, the core of the group is the U. S./Europe NATO alliance and the Gulf monarchies. The rest of the “coalition” are economic and political satellites of these main groups, who would sign on to any military adventure that the rich nations demanded of them, since otherwise the poorer nations would have their military, financial or political aid frozen.

Europe’s increased lust for blood is a relatively new phenomenon; the European divisions that erupted during the Iraq war and then the Libyan invasion seem to have been smoothed over. Now even Germany directly joins the war efforts, aiming to send missiles and troops to the Turkish border.

But NATO is still a U. S.-dominated military alliance. Its military action is in reality a U. S. led effort, as the European armies are minuscule in comparison, and lack much of the technological sophistication of U. S. weaponry. The advanced Russian missile systems that Syria is equipped with demand a direct U. S. military role to neutralize.

End game

Like Bush, Obama is using his coalition of the willing to distract from the fact that he is circumventing the U. N., thus bringing the post WWII system of international conflict resolution – already on life support – closer to death.

Also like Bush, Obama strategically exploited the U. N. to weaken Syria with sanctions, and when further U. N. action was not possible – because of the objections of China and Russia – Obama threw aside the U. N. and opted for NATO, a U. S./

sending me bills demanding payment of $30 a month, which landed consistently in the trash basket. Then they started mailing forms to sign by which the social obscurity administraitors would deduct $30 monthly forcing me thereby into the same unwanted contract. I filed those, too, as waste paper.

Here it is the twenty-first century and a few Americans still don’t get it. Where’s Comrade Lenin when those neocons need him? What to do? Ah! Print more money. Right before Christmas arrived the good tidings of their Your New Benefit Amount statement. My $646 goes up to $758, wow! That’s a humongous 17% “cost of living” increase. But wait: “The amount we deduct for Medicare medical insurance is $105.” So it’s $653, actually a $7 (or 1%) monthly “gain,” gee, thanks.

Uncle Sugar just won’t take no for an answer, so we few emancipators must start our underground railroad to such doctors as accept something of value on the back doorstep now, before a great many “free” healthcare States follow California into the abyss.

European alliance built specifically as a deterrent to the now-defunct Soviet Union.

Again like Bush, Obama has crafted a false motive for war. He has stolen Bush’s “weapons of mass destruction” by switching to “the use of chemical weapons” as his bogeyman worthy of military intervention. Obama’s bogeyman is as false as Bush’s was. The New York Times reports:

“...the effect of that statement [that Syria was planning to use chemical weapons] was somewhat undercut when France’s foreign minister, Laurent Fabius, asserted during a news conference that such reports were unconfirmed.”

This lack of confirmation hasn’t bothered the U. S. media, content repeating as truth any report issued by U. S. intelligence, no matter the past lies that have cost countless deaths in Iraq and elsewhere.

Of course the U. S. government has zero legitimacy to hand pick a “replacement” government for Syria, since the U. S. is universally hated in the region after the destruction of Iraq, Afghanistan, Libya and the ongoing drone wars against Pakistan and Yemen. No sane Syrian would invite the U. S. government to “liberate” his country.

In fact, a coalition of Syrian opposition groups inside that country, the National Coordination Committee (NCC) – virtually ignored by the U. S. media – opposes military intervention and demands the conflict be addressed through political means.

A leader of the NCC is Hassan Abdul Azim, who correctly states:

“We refuse on principle any type of military foreign intervention because it threatens the freedom of our country.”

Another prominent ongoing lie repeated by U.S. politicians and media is that the Syrian government is on the verge of collapse. This lie is effective in that it creates an urgency to “take action.” It also paints a picture of the conflict coming to an end that resonates well with Americans.

The reality is that the Syrian western-backed rebels stage daring high-profile attacks that have been largely repulsed by government counter-attacks.

Have guns, aim to keep ’em

clearly mental illness, coupled with the “shock and awe” indoctrination our own government sells America to promote its atrocities overseas. The New York Times piece bends statistics to explain that most mentally ill people aren’t usually violent. And while that may or may not be true, the fact is those who on rare occasion have committed these tragedies were all mentally ill and taking medication. At the end of the NYT’s unqualified rant, the author suggests:

All the focus on the small number of people with mental illness who are violent serves to make us feel safer by displacing and limiting the threat of violence to a small, well-defined group. But the sad and frightening truth is that the vast majority of homicides are carried out by outwardly normal people in the grip of all too ordinary human aggression to whom we provide nearly unfettered access to deadly force.

Unfortunately for the New York Times, “deadly force” is not a synonym for guns; deadly force can mean knives – as in the knives used instead of guns for mass killings in China, where the mentally ill, left untreated and to their own devices, simply pick easier targets before going on rampages that leave dozens maimed, and in some cases up to ten dead at a time. Deadly force can also mean box cutters, for example those box cutters allegedly used to hijack four planes on September 11, 2001, in killing 3,000 innocent people in a single day – not one shot fired.

Violence is driven by socioeconomic disparity, an inadequate healthcare system, and mentally ill people who are not given the help they need to be kept from hurting themselves and others. Mandating that a population disarm doesn’t guarantee that people will hand in their guns (i.e. Mexico) and does not stem violence. Disarming a population does, however, keep weapons out of the hands of law abiding citizens, the sort of people you would want to control such weapons, leaving guns in the hands of criminals and the government exclusively. In Mexico, this leaves an unarmed population to be fed off of by both heavily armed criminal gangs and a heavily armed, corrupt government able to operate with absolute impunity.

The U. S. government is likewise corrupt – and ever-seeking to expand the impunity within which it operates.

Draw the line

Americans will not give up their guns. they will not give up assault weapons. Law abiding citizens shouldn’t pay for the crimes of the mentally ill or socioeconomically motivated in a society that willfully neglects them, then exploits the tragedies this creates, merely for political gain. The exploitation of the Connecticut shooting is grotesque, journalists waiting like vultures to capture images of grieving families to splash across the covers of their publications.

Gun owners need to move beyond simply picking “representatives” (“pro-gun” Congressmen, NRA, etc.) to defend their rights on Capitol Hill. They need to organize locally to promote and preserve their rights. A government knowing that 200-500 armed citizens per county are highly organized, politically active and pragmatically prepared to defend their rights is a government that will seek profit and power elsewhere. Who is going to “confiscate” a community’s weapons if everyone in the community, including law enforcement, refuses to allow that line to be crossed?

Shooting clubs built around this idea locally should be organized. Gun safety taught by police or military instructors should be made available for members and non-members alike – and responsible gun ownership within an apolitical atmosphere promoted to provide an example of what an informed, responsible, armed citizenry looks like in the 21st century. Infowars’ short lived “Brothers in Arms” was a prototype of such an organization that should be revisited, or others should pick up and run with.

Countering the mediacracy

Improving the image of responsible gun owners – versus that knuckle-dragging image they are given by the mass media – is essential. To not only put together a local organization giving an informed, intelligent, apolitical/pragmatic face to gun ownership but compelling other gun owners to follow suit is the best defense in a war against our rights on a battlefield where much of the public is easily manipulated and emotionally compromised.

Walking away from the “left/right” paradigm is equally important, for “right” leaning individuals need to realize that big business corporatism is demanding a disarmed public to give it the space to grow domestically as its right-wing military machine mass murders overseas. The left must realize that the very same big business interests they point their fingers at are the architects behind most, if not all, of their talking points – not only on gun control, but everything from “climate change” to “human rights” overseas as a new casus belli for perpetual global war.

While building a stronger sense of community and working with a local sheriff that actually represents the people we should be policing our own, leaving the federal government no opportunity to try doing it for us. Medicated individuals who are brought to firing ranges should be red flags, and such families as show gross poor judgment should be addressed by the local community. A shooting range is a business that has the right to establish strict rules to promote best practices and responsibility.

We either draw the line and take upon ourselves responsibility for gun ownership, or the creep to strip our rights from us will insidiously continue exploiting the blood of the innocent and the broken minds of the mentally ill. Collective punishment is our future if we do not create a viable local deterrence across the nation to usurpers who seek greater impunity amongst an unarmed citizenry.

Tell the powers that be, “You’re not getting the guns, period,” and have the organizational capacity to back it up.

Time for our people to come out of their cupidity

By Christine Miller
millercbm@gmail.com

In the beginning was the lie. “If you eat from the tree of knowledge, you will be like God,” whispered the snake to Eve. She believed that lie, plucked a fruit from the forbidden tree, took a bite and passed it on to Adam. They did not become like God, but were kicked out of paradise into thorns and thistles, death awaiting them finally.

Fooled again – twice; shame!

And two invasions of Iraq started based upon prevarications, as that daughter of the Kuwait ambassador to the U. S. pretended she was a nurse, telling us teary eyed how Iraqi soldiers had taken Kuwaiti babies from their incubators, letting them die on the floor. It was a lie.

“Saddam Hussein has weapons of mass destruction” was the falsehood that brought us into the second war against Iraq. There were no weapons of mass destruction, only the mass destruction of Iraq, with a great many more Iraqis than those few thousand American GIs dead or maimed.

Biggest lie of all

Yet no people have suffered so much atrocity propaganda poured over them as the Germans. The United States entered WWI bandying a new slogan: “The War to End All Wars.” Germans were supposedly the warmongers, and eliminating them as a power would do away with wars. Germany since 1945 has been reduced to a political and military nonentity – but count the wars fought since then! America, flush with that victory terminating WWI, celebrated the roaring twenties, only to end badly with Black Friday and the Great Depression.

The atrocity preparation for WWI was outdone by the hate propaganda of WWII which is still with us. I quote from a recent Marshfield [Wisconsin] News Herald letter, “Mandate violates religious freedom (MNH: 10/27/2012),” by Myra Westberg.

“Hitler required lists of all children who had been born with a handicap. They soon were put to death to cut health care costs. The next to go were the elderly and the infirm. They were moved to ‘remote’ hospitals and ‘died’ of pneumonia. Abortion and sterilization was mandated if you did not have the proper DNA. Many looked the other way.”

My reply: DNA was not then discovered. If there had been such lists they would have been publicized after the war. My retarded cousin was not on a list and died of nicotine poisoning after the war. The ravages of nicotine were known in the thirties and the Nazis discouraged smoking. Only under “freedom and democracy,” in present day Germany, are the elderly and infirm shipped to cheaper old age homes in the Czech Republic and Poland. During the thirties, most of the elderly were succored within their families; nobody was shipped to a remote hospital.

One of the first legal actions of the Nazi regime was to outlaw abortion and forbid kosher butchering. Both are in vogue in the present Germany. The Nazis gave generous financial support to the two main churches, Protestant and Catholic. Over 400 new churches could be built because it was a period of prosperity. (Many churches were destroyed during Allied bombing raids.) During the Nazi period the churches were full. In present day Germany the Christian churches are empty, and the mosques are full.

We aren’t God

The truth will set you free. On account of lies we’re about to be kicked out of this paradise into thorns and thistles, the death of America’s dream awaiting us at the end.

Jews bribed Aryan nations to fight among themselves

The toll

Between 20 and 25 million Germans and collaborators perished in the years after the war had officially ended. It is a crime that will never be forgotten, and it is a crime that will forever stain the hands and national consciences of the former USSR, the United States of America, Great Britain and her Commonwealth nations, and perhaps more pointedly the Anglo and Slavic races of the White supra-race.

A little German boy holds a lantern as he sits in a wagon en route to the Allied lines in the bitter winter snow. He’s with his mother. She’s bleeding profusely; she’s dying. The German doctor whom the little boy was lucky enough to hunt down is doing his best to perform a tamponade (a blockage) of her uterus. She was brutally, viciously raped. Did she survive? Goodrich doesn’t say, but the prognosis and tone suggests she didn’t make it. She was a German. She supported Hitler. She was a Nazi. She deserved it.

She deserved it.

So said the Allies in the years following the war: Germany merely got what she deserved. The “morally superior” White nations of the globe had smashed ultimate evil: the Nazis; the German race.

Never has a greater lie been told. Never has so much hatred and vengeance been poured forth onto one people and one nation that had chosen not to abide by the laws of international bankers and financiers who wish only to enslave, plunder, steal and when necessary kill. And most of the White races of the world were more than willing and eager to take up the flag of international Jewish money power and to smash the one White race that opposed it with such honor, valor and sheer might – so much so that it took all the best brain- and material-power of the entire White supra-race and all the monetary power of its Jewish financiers and overlords to break its back. And yet... and yet... it still was not broken. Goodrich ends the book with a tone of hope.

Beyond hell

When all had been destroyed, when all seemed to have been lost forever in Year Zero, the Germans proved once again that such was just not the case. Brick by brick and hour by hour they rebuilt upon the ruins of God’s Empire a new Germany. No Holocaust by fire, no genocide nor famine or other inhuman atrocities could obliterate or subdue the Germanic element of the White race of humankind.

Even though Germany today is still an occupied nation with a hurting people, she still possesses that flicker of life and spirituality that the other White races and nations lost long ago when they sold their souls to Judaism and the Jewish “god” of hatred and revenge, Jahve. “Unbowed, unbent, unbroken.” Such are the words of an album released by a European band named Hammerfall. And such are the words that describe the German people, German folk and the German race. The only ones who bear the burden of bloodstain and guilt are the Allies.

No crimes in recorded human history surpass those inflicted against Germany and Europe by the United States, Great Britain and the former United Soviet Socialist Republics – all with Jewish spiritual, media and financial backing and support.

Goodbye silence, hello truth

vnnforum.com

It was the most deadly and destructive war in human history. Millions were killed, billions in property was destroyed, ancient cultures were reduced to rubble – World War II was truly man’s greatest cataclysm. Thousands of books, movies and documentary films have been devoted to the war. There has never been such a terrible retelling of the story, however, as one will find in Hellstorm. In a chilling “you-are-there” style, the author places the reader at the scene, in the moment. Throughout this book readers will see what Allied airman saw as they rained down death on German cities; or the reader will experience what those below experienced as they sat trembling in their bomb shelters awaiting that very same death from above. The reader will view up close the horrors of the Eastern Front during the last months of fighting and through the mud, blood and madness of combat they may come to understand how the same German soldiers, who only moments before had destroyed an enemy tank, could now risk their own lives to rescue the trapped Soviet crew inside. Readers will witness for themselves the fate of German women as the rampaging Red Army raped and murdered its way across Europe – all females, from “eight to eighty” feared the dreaded words, “Frau Komm.” The worst nautical disasters in history which claimed thousands of lives, the greatest mass migration known to man in which millions perished, the fate of those wretched victims in post-war death camps and torture chambers, these and many other dark secrets of World War II now come to light in Hellstorm.

Yanks and Brits in decline

Though it may take some years or centuries, the truth eventually breaks out. Not a single rewrite of history by the Jews is forever.

Savitri Devi wrote in a letter to Miguel Serrano in 1980 that which has an aura of prophecy about it:

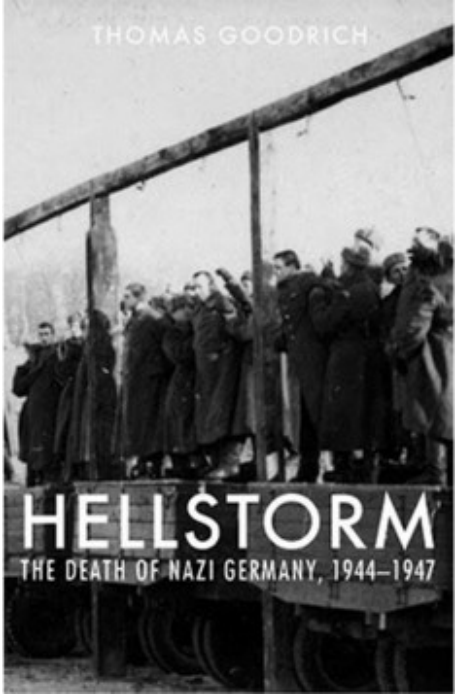

In my eyes, even though Adolf Hitler “decided to become a politician” at the end of World War I, he never succeeded in doing so. Otherwise he never would have ordered ten kilometers between his advancing army and the fleeing British Expeditionary Force, in 1940. Any “politician” – any politically-minded army chief – would have ordered his soldiers to accelerate their pace and capture (or wipe out) the whole British Expeditionary Force, not allowed them to embark at Dunkirk in safety.

But the Führer was much more than a politician. He was an incarnation of the divine energy that fights to save whatever still appears to deserve to survive, be it in this dark age. So he held out his hand – not once, but again and again – to England. England chose to listen to her Jewish misleaders instead of to him, and rejected the sincere, friendly gesture.

For that, she shall die – not the glorious death on the battlefield, but the slow, nauseating death through blood-mixture and all manner of vice. Within less than 300 years to come – unless there be a miracle – there shall be no more England. My mother’s compatriots (my mother was descended from Jütland Vikings) will have given way before teeming millions of mongrels – a hotch potch of Jamaicans, Africans, Pakistanis, Jews; and degenerate English women having nothing in common with their forefathers, except that they might well still be “Christians.”

The few remaining pure-blooded English Aryans – 50,000? 20,000? – foreigners in the land of their ancestors, will gather on the eighth of May and curse Mr. Churchill, and on the 16th of October, and pay homage to the martyrs of Nuremberg, and on the 20th of April, and sing hymns to the glory of the race-savior, Adolf Hitler, and bow down in shame and in grief before his everlasting presence, that those fools of 1940-41 rejected.

LOST RIGHTS:

Right against self-incrimination

By Lt. Colonel Donald Sullivan (Ret)
aloe910@aol.com

As many of you readers may remember, one of the most blatant violations of our constitutionally protected rights of which I’m personally aware was committed against my son on March 24th, 2009. He was stopped at what has now become a commonplace event in this land of the free, a State Patrol checkpoint in Pender County, North Carolina, and required to have his papers checked. After obediently presenting his valid Michigan license to the trooper (they call themselves “trooper” now, since “patrolman” is no longer PC with women on the force), he was asked, “Where do you live?” He respectfully declined to answer, offering instead his decision to exercise his guaranteed Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination, reminding the trooper that he held the valid Michigan license in his hand.

Huh?

The trooper promptly arrested and put him in handcuffs for refusing to answer his questions and then recited the Miranda rights which oddly enough begin with, “You have the right to remain silent. Any information you give can be used against you in a court of law.”

My son was also charged with failure to have a North Carolina driver’s license and not having a valid North Carolina vehicle registration on his “motor vehicle.” He was subsequently presented before a magistrate and jailed under a $50,000.00 cash bond.

My son, a legal resident of Michigan at the time, is the father of five and has been married for 13 years to their mother. I have taught him his rights, including his right against self-incrimination. To my complete surprise, he was convicted by a jury for refusing to answer questions and for not having North Carolina registration on his pickup. Confusingly, he was found not guilty on the North Carolina driver’s license charge, his Michigan license having been determined by the trooper to be valid by the time of trial. Since Michigan does not have “reciprocity” with North Carolina, the trooper had to confirm that information the old fashioned way and could not do it at the scene. Thus, a known legal resident of another State was convicted for not registering his private automobile in this State, which, by the way, is against the law in this State. He was fined by the court and given a 45-day jail sentence, suspended, with five days active time.

House of mirrors

My son appealed the jury’s verdict as being a violation of a protected right as well as a conflicted decision, arguing that a legal resident of Michigan with a valid Michigan license did not need to register his vehicles in North Carolina. He also argued that the jury’s oath was improper in that it was not executed in accordance with North Carolina statutes and pursuant to both the federal and State constitutions. The court of appeals denied his appeal, and the NC Supreme Court refused certiorari. Based upon my experiences with the U. S. Supreme Court, he decided any further appeals would prove futile.

On March 22, 2011, he filed a civil rights lawsuit in federal court under Title 42, Section 1983, “civil action for deprivation of rights,” citing as defendants all judicial officers involved in his case including, but not limited to, the Chief Justice of the NC Supreme Court and the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts, as well as the State trooper who started it all. Not surprisingly, after a protracted period in the judicial mill, his case was dismissed; in my opinion mostly because at the same time I had a similar case in the system which was severely dragging it down. For the State judicial defendants, the court had used that old standby, “absolute, sovereign, judicial immunity,” as the basis for “failure to state a claim for which relief can be granted,” to cover the claims against them individually and professionally. I have by now seen that statement so many times that I should just write it on my complaints as soon as I file them.

The real surprise, though, was the legal argument used by that court to dismiss the claims against the State trooper, who was included individually and in his official capacity: “Qualified Immunity.” Quoting from the order of the court,

The court must ask two questions to determine whether qualified immunity applies. The court must determine “whether the facts that a plaintiff has alleged...make out a violation of a constitutional right” ...The court must also determine “whether the right at issue was clearly established at the time of defendant’s alleged misconduct”... “A government official’s conduct violates clearly established law when, at the time of the challenged conduct, [t]he contours of [a] right [are] sufficiently clear that every reasonable official would have understood that what he is doing violates that right”... Defendants are entitled to summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds if the answer to either question is “no.” *The allegations of Sullivan’s complaint, viewed in a light most favorable to him, fail to state a constitutional violation...*the court dismisses plaintiff’s section 1983 claims.”

[Cites omitted and emphasis mine.]

So, you see, remaining silent is evidently not a right if the law enforcement officer asks a question.

No “government official” therefore can be expected to recognize our right to remain silent, even though this same individual then informs us we have a right to remain silent.

The only explanation I can discover here is that the courts have apparently confused the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination with the Supreme Court’s requirement that a Miranda warning be issued. The Fifth Amendment right needs no trigger, such as arrest; whereas the Miranda warning is not required until after a subject is placed under arrest. The court doesn’t consider the right to remain silent having any effect until one is “under arrest.”

Mitt Romney didn’t even want to win

By James Buchanan
whithecivilrights.com

Romney was the “designated loser” for the 2012 election. He was supposed to be the big “palooka.” In the boxing world, a “palooka” is a washed-up, punch-drunk boxer past his prime, who is put up against a rising young fighter in order to give “the Kid” an easy win and make him look good.

A recent news article notes “Mitt Romney didn’t want to be president anyway. That’s what Tagg Romney, Mitt’s oldest son, told the Boston Globe for its big post-mortem on his father’s failed presidential bid published December 23. “He wanted to be president less than anyone I’ve met in my life,” Tagg Romney told the paper. “He had no desire to ... run. If he could have found someone else to take his place ... he would have been ecstatic to step aside.”

Unfortunately, Romney wasn’t willing to step aside so that Ron Paul could run. Romney was a System candidate, and the System is set up so that a candidate who respects the Constitution or opposes this slavish subservience to Israel doesn’t get to be the Republican presidential candidate.

Romney reportedly had a billion dollars for advertising, but ran few if any national ads. He could have attacked:

- Obama adding six trillion to the national debt;
- The U. S. credit rating being lowered twice under Obama;
- The Fast and Furious Scandal and Obama’s failure to fire Eric Holder;
- The addition of 17 million people to the food stamp program and
- The Benghazi scandal where Obama let four Americans die.

Romney demonstrated that he could mop the floor with Obama in a debate if he tried, as happened in the first debate, but then Romney eased up after he had Obama on the ropes.

One more strong debate performance would have put Obama behind by too many votes for the Democrats to steal, but Romney went back into wimp mode and didn’t try to challenge or confront Obama even though that had worked spectacularly well in the first debate.

When your opponent has a horrendous record on the economy and you’ve got one billion dollars in campaign donations, you should hammer your opponent’s record and you should be running lots of national ads since you’ve got a consistent message for the whole country.

Organizations for crime now

My impression of the 2012 election is that it was stolen from Romney. Even though Romney ran a mostly lackluster campaign except for the first debate, public opinion was that Obama did a terrible job and most Americans wanted to vote him out, hoping for an economic recovery, not

By that definition, being detained by an officer without freedom to leave does not constitute an “arrest,” but instead having voluntarily stopped and asked the license checkpoint to “Look at my papers, please.” By definition, this situation is quite clearly an “arrest,” notwithstanding that as State created entities the courts will find for the State every time, and most certainly if the complainant is a White guy, no offense intended.

Conclusion

I’ve said it before, and we’ve yet again proven, in court, that we are left with only that remedy prescribed for us by the U. S. Supreme Court in United States versus the heirs of Robert E. Lee in 1882:

It seems to be opposed to all the principles upon which the rights of the citizen, when brought in collision with the acts of the government, must be determined. In such cases there is no safety for the citizen, except in the protection of the tribunals, for rights which have been invaded by the officers of the government, professing to act in its name. There remains to him but the alternative of resistance, which may amount to crime.

[Emphasis mine.]

I again leave it to the reader to determine for himself what that “crime” must be. Perhaps secession or refusing to pay our taxes would work, but I don’t think so. As for me and my house, that decision has already been made. We are far past the point where civil disobedience will resolve the problems between our government and the people.

just more national debt.

The vote-stealing left-wing organization ACORN was supposedly disbanded after a major scandal in 2009. Unfortunately, the news is that “The Obama Administration has given a former director at the scandal-plagued Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN) nearly half a billion dollars.” You can steal a lot of votes with half a billion dollars.

A recent poll notes that 49 percent of Republicans think the 2012 election was stolen from Romney.

Not only was the 2012 election likely stolen, Republicans were being sabotaged with a System candidate who didn’t even want to win!

Once again, the L.A. Times is lying to its readers. There are not 650 miles of fence separating the United States and Mexico. There are about 310 miles of fence – much of it useless like that 20-year-old fence in the Times photo – and 320 miles of vehicle barriers that stop nothing.

Russia ousts meddling U. S. NGOs, fake protests peter out

By Tony Cartalucci
activistpost.com

Saturday, December 15 saw a disappointing show for Western-backed protesters in Moscow – with estimates of only a few hundred showing up. Led by faux-Communist Sergey Udaltsov and confirmed Western-funded opposition leaders Alexey Navalny, Ilya Yashin, and Boris Nemtsov, even the Western media had to admit the momentum they had hoped to incite is failing to materialize.

AFP’s “Year on, Russian opposition subdued but not defeated,” and Washington Post’s “Thousands protest against Putin, but opposition momentum has slowed,” despite unqualified attempts to embellish the size and strength of both the protest and the opposition in general, reflect the winding down of Western attempts to foment chaos across Russia.

While the Washington Post cites Russian President Vladimir Putin’s “co-opting” of opposition issues, by actually addressing legitimate concerns regarding his government, there is also another dimension that is more muted.

Russian battle against foreign subversion

Reuters alludes to alternate possible explanations in their article, “No Russian revolution after a year of protests,” stating:

Putin was elected to a six-year third term in March and the parliament, dominated by his party, has pushed through laws which critics say can be used to stifle dissent – tightening controls of the internet, imposing new checks on foreign-funded lobby groups and broadening the definition of treason.

Indeed, Russia has placed immense restrictions on foreign-funded lobby groups and NGOs, demanding that they exhibit the same level of transparency and honesty that they themselves demand of the government.

Foreign subversion, however, requires a degree of deceit and exploitation toward targeted segments of the population. Subversion will not work if its agents are required to state on all their pamphlets, websites, and signs that they are foreign-funded – and predictably both the U. S. and the opposition it has contrived inside Russia derided the pro-transparency legislation.

This is what Reuters categorically fails to mention – that the entire so-called “opposition” is in fact foreign-funded, with at least one of Saturday’s protest leaders, Boris Nemtsov, earlier this year being caught slinking into the U. S. Embassy for a secret meeting with then newly appointed U. S. Ambassador to Russia, Michael McFaul.

Birds of a feather

U. S. Ambassador McFaul himself has chaired the U. S. National Endowment for Democracy and Freedom House, both of which directly fund and support many amongst the “Russian” opposition. In other words Nemtsov in his early 2012 U. S. Embassy appearance was visiting his paymaster. Alexey Navalny, another leader present at Saturday’s disappointing showing, was a Yale World Fellow, and in his profile it states:

Alexey Navalny
U. S.-funded “activist”

Navalny spearheads legal challenges on behalf of minority shareholders in large Russian companies, including Gazprom, Bank VTB, Sberbank, Rosneft, Transneft and Surgutneftegaz, through the Union of Minority Shareholders. He has successfully forced companies to disclose more information to their shareholders and has sued individual managers at several major corporations for allegedly corrupt practices. Navalny is also co-founder of the Democratic Alternative [DA!] movement and was vice-chairman of the Moscow branch of the political party YABLOKO. In 2010, he launched RosPil, a public project funded by unprecedented fundraising in Russia. In 2011, Navalny started RosYama, which combats fraud in the road construction sector.

The Democratic Alternative, also written DA!, is indeed a National Endowment for Democracy fund recipient, meaning that Alexey Navalny is an agent of U. S.-funded sedition and willfully hiding it from his followers. The U. S. State Department itself reveals this as they list “youth movements” operating in Russia:

DA!: Mariya Gaydar, daughter of former Prime Minister Yegor Gaydar, leads DA! (Democratic Alternative). She is ardent in her promotion of democracy, but realistic about the obstacles she faces. Gaydar said that DA! is focused on non-partisan activities designed to raise political awareness. She has received funding from the National Endowment for Democracy, a fact she does not publicize for fear of appearing compromised by an American connection.

Alexey was involved in founding a movement directly funded by the U. S. government and to this day has the very people who funded DA! defending him throughout the Western media. The mention of co-founder Mariya Gaydar is also revealing, as she has long collaborated, and occasionally has been arrested with, Ilya Yashin, yet another leader of a NED-funded Russian “activist” opposition group.

Ilya Yashin, who was detained before arriving at Saturday’s protest, leads the Moscow branch of the People’s Freedom Party and is a leading member of the “Strategy 31” campaign, which claims to be fighting for the freedom of assembly. Unfortunately, Strategy 31’s ranks are filled with activists trained and coordinated by U. S. NED-funded NGOs. From the official NED.org website we find:

The American mediocracy doesn’t want to know about these rallies. In Moscow, authorities have allowed such nationalist groups as the Movement Against Illegal Immigration (DPNI) and Slavic Force to stage events of up to 5,500 people. With chants of “Russia is for Russians, Moscow is for Muscovites,” activists, mainly youngsters, march from Lyublino to Maryuno subway stations on the capital’s outskirts with flags, nationalist symbols and slogans demanding that immigrants be sent back to their countries.

Moscow Group of Assistance in the Implementation of the Helsinki Accords $50,000. To draw greater

Worse yet, Yashin’s People’s Freedom Party isn’t an assembly of aspiring youth seeking “freedom” for the Russian people, but it’s rather lined with career politicians and businessmen collaborating together with foreign interests. Among them, one Vladimir Ryzhkov is a member of the NED-funded, Washington-based World Movement for Democracy. There is also Boris Nemtsov, whose advisor, Vladimir Kara-Murza (of Solidarnost) took part in a September 14, 2011, NED-sponsored event titled, “Elections in Russia: Polling and Perspectives” where they used a NED-funded polling organization, “Levada Center,” to project “winners” in the upcoming elections and study the Manezh riots of 2010 – for now obvious reasons, as the U. S. attempts to fan flames of unrest across Russia.

Russia faces subversion, not revolution.

What gathered in Moscow on Saturday, December 15, 2012, was not representative of the Russian people’s dissatisfaction with their government. It was the organized, funded and promoted expression of Wall Street and Washington’s ambitions regarding the division and despoilment of the Russian nation – as it was well along the way of accomplishing in the ’90s after the collapse of the Soviet Union during the “age of oligarchs.”

Just like the West is attempting to do around the world, from Egypt to Tunisia, from Libya to Syria and across Asia, it is couching hegemonic expansion within the cause of “democracy” and “freedom” – diminishing both as it exploits the well-meaning intentions of millions around the world.

The closing of the U. S. NGO cash spigot in Russia and subsequent petering out of the so-called opposition is no coincidence but another exhibit of Western duplicity, abusing both the masses and the better lives they seek.

Images: Caught red-handed – Russia’s opposition, long accused by the Kremlin of being foreign-funded, and who have well documented ties to the U. S. State Department, are caught filing into the U. S. Embassy in Moscow in January of 2012, just days after agitator Michael McFaul began his stint as U. S. Ambassador to Russia.

attention to the issue of freedom of assembly in Russia and to the “Strategy 31” movement, which seeks to protect this fundamental right. The organization will train a network of regional activists and coordinate their activities through mini-seminars and field visits, and conduct an information campaign through press conferences, posters, and educational handouts pertaining to freedom of assembly, to be distributed to the general public by regional partners.”

Conspiratorial smoking guns

This is also confirmed in NED’s “Democracy Digest” where the “Moscow Helsinki Group” is explicitly stated as leading Strategy 31 marches and that the group is a “long-time grantee of the National Endowment for Democracy.

A letter pushed by Israeli Lobby faction AIPAC and signed by more than half of the members in the U. S. House of Representatives is demanding that the Obama Administration move against the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) to express “displeasure” regarding Palestine’s having gained recognition as a non-member but with observer status at the United Nations.

The letter calls for the U. S. to exercise immediate force and close the PLO’s office in Washington DC and recall the U. S. Consul-General from Jerusalem, as well as immediately defund the United Nations and all U. N.-affiliated organizations that recognize Palestine.

Israeli regime receives first sanction: analyst

“Yes, the sanctions on Israel have begun, starting with the Palestinian UN vote. Fear of the Israeli lobby is now going to be withheld.”

By Jim W. Dean
veteranstoday.com

The ripple effects of the historic U. N. vote to begin the restoration of Palestinian statehood continue to swirl around the world.

How much of it is acting and how much sincere remains to be seen. But we must all applaud the effort and get ready to defend those that will be attacked by the Israeli lobbies when they feel it is safe to strike back.

Not all of us will go over to the offense at the same time. Not all will understand fully why the political earth is moving under their feet, but they can feel it for sure. I am a good example. I have been really focusing on how best to follow up the U. N. vote with some serious sanctions movement. But the light just came for me today, that the sanctions started as the U. N. votes were being counted.

The classic military tactic for taking a bridge is to attack both ends at once, à la the Nimegen Bridge in the great movie, The Bridge Too Far. The Likudist bridge will need a sanctions attack from the outside and Israelis on the inside taking the other end.

Israeli security can only come from the regime change for which Gush Shalom’s Uri Avnery has struggled for forty years now. We have to work together to accomplish this with minimum destruction and bloodshed.

Israeli WMDs and the budget follies

The quickly passed U. N. resolution calling for Israel to open up its nuclear facilities for inspection was, as expected, rejected by Israel. Netanyahu’s settlement expansion announcement, though probably an election pandering bluff to the settler and extremist core of the Likud party, was what we call in America an “air deal.” It has no funding, and none on the horizon. Donations, anyone?

We must not forget that we are having new Israeli elections soon because their former cabinet could not pass a budget. They have no money for major construction projects, and I don’t think Obama is entertaining a request.

The E. U. heads adjourned recently, also failing to approve a new budget. The problem seemed to be the Santa Claus factor. Countries wanted funding for stimulation projects, but also to have others pay for them.

And back here in the U. S., the media are on a big “fiscal cliff” scare, with both political sides maneuvering to blame the other for the new year’s economy problems. Taking responsibility for nothing is now the most popular Congressional sport.

Settlement backlash

For extra public diversion insurance, the Mayan calendar end of the world prediction had gotten widespread news coverage from corporate media. It’s a journalistic embarrassment when there are so many important problems that were cheated out of that public air time.

The good news was that even the threat of Bibi’s settlement building triggered an international backlash. One country after another brought in the Israeli ambassadors to put their disapproval on record. The Likuds of course have told them to go fly a kite. The militant Israelis are burning up trump cards faster than they are making them.

Germany has expressed disapproval of Israeli plans to build more settlements on the occupied Palestinian territories. In the photo above, German Chancellor Angela Merkel (R) is seen next to Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, December 6, 2012.

The comments on my sanctions articles definitely struck a chord. People saw the irony of the most sanction-deserving country in the world having appointed itself as the head sanctioneer. They saw the gross hypocrisy in Israel accusing Iran of a nuclear weapons program that it does not have, while Israel’s own remained off the table for discussion.

This is now being understood as nothing more than a way to keep the outside money (U. S. and Diaspora) flowing in to fund the occupation and keep the regular Israelis controlled by the fear that all the Arabs and Muslims have to be dominated or it is all over for the Zios. The U. S. shares the blame for this.

We had a shot across the bow with the U. N. resolution vote that the “no talkie” days may be over. People understand in all countries that their political establishments must be openly challenged for remaining silent on such a critical issue.

Losing fear of the bully

What I see that gives me more cause for hope, something I have been monitoring very carefully for years now, is a definite and widespread decrease of the fear which empowered the various Israeli lobbies. It was this fear that pressured our respective political structures to serve Israeli interests in return for re-election support and political power, something they have a long history of delivering on.

The crash and burn of the Romney campaign, despite the best efforts of the hardcore Zionist lobby folks trying to bring Obama to heel, did not work. The purge of our military of “questionable” officers continues, with only the tip of the iceberg of it seen publicly.

If the real story ever comes out, it will be

Iran has last say in Persian Gulf region

For more than a decade the tiny State of nuclear-armed Israel has, while invading its neighbors, cried about Iran arming itself. Well, why not? Here is no easy prey.

A senior Iranian military official, Major General Yahya Rahim-Safavi, says the Islamic Republic is the region’s unrivaled power thanks to its geopolitical situation.

“Major [world] powers and regional ones have no other option but to deal with Iran if they want to have a share of regional an unpleasant one.

Treason is never a popular topic. When it is widespread, it condemns the whole system that allowed it. The term Obama used in his directive was to “mitigate the insider threats.” This was code for no public trials.

There may also be some big surprises in store when the first official Benghazi attack report is made public, about who really was involved in that. And by that I don’t mean their proxies on the ground, but those pulling their strings. No one will buy the tent dwelling al-Qaeda dead-enders in Yemen. That is just swill.

Sanctions are having unintended consequences

There is some good news on the Senate new sanctions bill. Obama is not waiting for the expected watering down when the House and Senate combine their two bills. He is acting now. The previous exemptions for twenty of Iran’s major oil buyers have all been renewed, with their previous reductions.

Although some say the sanctions have hurt Iran’s currency value, the government has continued to expand replacement of the lost oil exports with gas and electricity to “sanction proof” neighboring countries. And Iran may soon be in the drone exporting business with newly acquired technology, interests,” Rahim-Safavi said on Dec. 18.

The senior military adviser to the Leader of the Islamic Revolution Ayatollah Seyyed Ali Khamenei underlined the compliments of its being over-used and exposed by someone not paying attention to the first one having been lost.

Turkey quickly stated that it would continue its Iranian gas purchases as it was in their national interests, and they know that no action will be taken against them for it. If they want to pay with gold, they will do so, no matter what a bunch of Israeli senators in America say.

Losing public relations war

The West is losing the public relations battle over the suffering of the Iranian people. Germany’s Merkel was very public in her announcement for her government to remove medicine export problems that have been tangled up in the banking sanctions.

Secretary Clinton’s statements have just been crude, with shades of Madeleine Albright’s horrific comments on the 500,000 Iraqi children having died from sanctions... for their parents to take their complaints to Saddam.

As citizens in the West are all suffering from these poor government judgments, excesses and financial corruption for which they are being given the bill, there is growing awareness that the Iran threat is just a scam.

They are beginning to see the Iranian people being made to suffer as an excuse to justify Western military expansion into the region. I sense an opening here for Westerners to see themselves joined with the Iranians in that those in the West are just being “sanctioned” in a different way. They can’t afford the medical care they need either.

I would recommend that Iran begin hosting exchange groups with comparable citizens groups from these various countries to share their common exploitation by the criminal cabals behind all the war threat hype. It is a common bond that links all of the rank and file citizens everywhere who are being used and abused by their elites.

Gordon Duff just had a great article on Press TV about how billions and billions of future trading profits are being made by political insiders who use increasing tensions and the decreasing of them to move the markets and make their bets pay off.

So yes, the sanctions on Israel have begun, starting with the Palestinian U. N. vote. Fear of the Israeli lobby is now going to be withheld. Holocaust manipulation is no longer going to be swallowed.

People are going to refuse to be second class citizens in their own countries while they watch the Israeli lobbyists wine and dine with our government officials, and, worst of all, even draft legislation to be passed into laws which we must follow but not they.

significance of the Persian Gulf and the strategic Strait of Hormuz, which have been the focus of the world powers in the past 50 years.

“The Persian Gulf region and the Strait of Hormuz are influential on economic, political, and cultural issues [of the world] and are very effective from various viewpoints in the world,” he stated.

Rahim-Safavi further stressed the strategic situation of Iran in the region, noting that the Islamic Republic will have the first say in the Persian Gulf for many years to come.

Oswald Innocence Campaign

oswald-innocent.com

A gathering of JFK researchers and students who are committed to spreading the truth that – in spite of ingenious efforts to conceal it – Lee Harvey Oswald was the “Man in the Doorway” in the famous Altgens photo, which thereby exonerates him of any and all guilt in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. It is the smoking gun of the JFK assassination.

Alert! The first-ever Altgens photo reenactment has been done by the OIC.

To view the results go to: 49 Years in the Offing: The Altgens Reenactment

The truth about Lee Harvey Oswald can clearly be seen at right, where he is standing in the doorway of the Texas School Book Depository during the assassination. Lee was watching the passing motorcade, and it proves that he could not have been up on the 6th floor firing at President Kennedy.

There was a conspiracy in the JFK assassination, and Lee Harvey Oswald was innocent. We provide abundant photographic evidence and many JFK assassination facts and figures which prove conspiracy and cover-up. Stop the lies! Lee Harvey Oswald outside!

Senior Members of the Oswald Innocence Campaign

David Wrone, retired Professor of History at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point (UWSP), is the honored mentor of the Oswald Innocence Campaign. Professor Wrone offered courses on The Great Books of Western Civilization, Native American history, and the JFK assassination. He is the author of The Assassination of John F. Kennedy: A Comprehensive Historical and Legal Bibliography, The HSCA, the Zapruder Film, and the Single-Bullet Theory, and The Zapruder Film: Reframing the JFK Assassination. In the latter book, Chapter 11 promotes Oswald as the “Man in the Doorway.” A synopsis of it headlines the Wrap page.

James H. Fetzer, Ph.D., former Marine Corps officer and McKnight University Professor Emeritus, has chaired or co-chaired four national conferences on the death of JFK. He produced the documentary JFK: The Assassination, the Cover-Up, and Beyond (1994). He also edited Assassination Science (1998), Murder in Dealey Plaza (2000), and The Great Zapruder Film Hoax (2003). He co-edits the online journal assassinationresearch.com with John Costella and publishes on Veterans Today.

Ralph C. Cinque has worked in the health field as a chiropractor and health spa operator, and he is the former president of an international physicians group. Ralph has also been an avid student of the JFK assassination for many years, and he has had his articles on the assassination published on Veterans Today and on LewRockwell.com – one of the most widely read alternative news sites in the world.

Donald Miller is a leading cardiovascular surgeon, and he is a professor of cardiac surgery at the University of Washington. He is also a leading nutritional physician. And, he has a longstanding interest in the JFK assassination, borne in part by his friendship with Dr. Malcolm Perry, who told him the truth about JFK’s neck wound seen at Parkland Hospital.

Richard Hooke has a degree in Cultural Anthropology from UC Santa Barbara, is a former computer systems analyst for Bank of America and is a writer and researcher on the JFK assassination. He has proven astute at figuring out how images were altered and shifted to perpetrate the deception. Richard’s ability to communicate with graphics is astounding.

Orlando Martin spent 20 years in the U. S. Navy where he was a firearms and ballistics expert. As a drill instructor, he received the Navy/Marine Corp Achievement Medal for the outstanding performance of his company. He participated in Operation Desert Storm and the ensuing liberation of Kuwait. Orlando is also an avid JFK assassination researcher, and he is the author of JFK: Analysis of a Shooting.

isn't for everybody. But you know someone who needs it.

Craig Roberts is a former military and police sharpshooter with a long career in the Marines and the Tulsa Police Department. He is the author of Kill Zone: A Sniper Looks at Dealey Plaza. Craig is also a certified firearms instructor, helicopter pilot, and black belt in karate. Craig’s account of his visit to the Assassination Museum in Dallas, where he got to size up the kill zone, is very gripping. Craig knew immediately that Oswald could not have done it.

Phillip F. Nelson is the author of LBJ: The Mastermind of the JFK Assassination, in which he contends that Johnson was a cardinal instigator of the plot to kill JFK. LBJ conceived of it perhaps as early as 1961 before enlisting others in 1962-63 to handle its design and execution. Phillip explains how Johnson was uniquely positioned to assemble all the key men – from the financiers to the operational planners and the cover-up experts – to complete the job. And it was all done at the expense of a “patsy” named Lee Harvey Oswald.

Peter Janney grew up in Washington D.C. during the Cold War era of the 1950s and 1960s. His father Wistar Janney was a senior career CIA official. The Janney family was intimately involved with many of the Washington political elite that included the family of Mary and Cord Meyer, as well as other high-ranking CIA officials such as Richard Helms, Jim Angleton, Tracy Barnes, Desmond FitzGerald, and William Colby. In his gripping book, Mary’s Mosaic, Peter illuminates a magnitude of real-life evil that most of us could never imagine.

Pete Mellor lives in England. He is a retired college lecturer in marine electronics (radio and radar) much like the work Lee Oswald did in Japan. Pete has been an avid student of the JFK assassination since 1990 and has traveled to the U. S. to attend JFK conferences, including the JFK Lancer symposium in Dallas in 2003 to commemorate the 40th anniversary. He is also a member of the Mary Ferrell Foundation. Pete edits the pages of the OIC site.

Larry Rivera was born in Alaska, the son of a career military man who served as CID officer in the Army. He was in Germany on 11/22/63, age 6, and will never forget his father’s reaction upon hearing of JFK’s murder. (“Johnson!”) Larry is a Certified Network Engineer and also owns an automotive wholesale parts business. He has made a lifelong study of the JFK assassination, making his first trip to Dealey Plaza in 1991. He attended ASK Symposium in 1993 for the 30th anniversary. He has given interviews about the assassination to Spanish media. Larry has assembled the most complete dossier on Billy Nolan Lovelady ever done.

Roy Schaeffer graduated from Aviation Electronics school in the Marine Corps in 1960. After graduating, he was assigned to the El Toro Air Station in California, just like Oswald. In 1963, he was working as a photo processor at the Dayton Daily News when he personally received the Altgens6 photo-fax. Immediately, he could see signs of alteration, such as “masking” and “opaquing.” That began a lifelong commitment to the cause of JFK truth. Roy is the author of three books on the JFK assassination (unpublished), plus nine articles, and his many JFK scrapbooks were donated to the University of Dayton. Roy was among the first researchers to say that it was Oswald in the doorway.

“If he had been allowed to live there would not have been a shift of U. S. policy in favor of Israel right or wrong; in all probability the 1967 war would not have happened – Greater Israel would not have been created; and the Zionist State would not have been allowed to develop nuclear weapons.” – Alan Hart’s assessment in Zionism – The Real Enemy of the Jews (p. 560 Volume One; available only from booksellers in the UK)

Israel won’t achieve its expansionist goals, says Turkey

presstv.ir
Turkey has denounced Israel’s plans to construct thousands of new illegal settler units in the occupied West Bank and East al-Quds (Jerusalem), saying Tel Aviv will not achieve its expansionist goals.

“We strongly condemn Israel, which undermines international law with its illegal settlement activities that deliberately destroy grounds for enduring and fair peace,” the Turkish Foreign Ministry said in a statement on December 19.

“Israel must understand that it won’t achieve its goals of changing the historical, cultural and religious nature of Palestinian territories by unilateral moves, unceasing settlement activities and other policies that are in violation of international law,” the statement added.

“We call on Israel to fulfill its responsibilities in line with international law for permanent peace in the Middle East and to put an end at once to its all activities that damage the grounds for peace,” it further said.

Ankara also urged the international community to take necessary precautions in the face of Israel’s “unilateral and illegal activities.”

“Turkey will continue to stand by the Palestinian people in the face of Israel’s implementations in violation of international law,” the statement concluded.

On December 20, Israel issued tenders for 1,048 new settler units in the occupied West Bank and East al-Quds.

Earlier that day, Tel Aviv officials also approved the construction of over 2,600 new settler units, which are planned to be built in Givat HaMatos, a village located in the south of al-Quds.

The Israeli settlements are considered illegal by the UN and most countries because those territories were captured by Israel in a 1967 war, and are hence seen as being subject to the Geneva Conventions, which forbids construction on occupied lands.

Israel agreed to freeze settlement construction under the Roadmap for Peace plan in 2002. But it has failed to comply with that commitment despite repeated and widespread international condemnation.

More than half a million Israelis live in over 120 illegal settlements built since the 1967 Israeli occupation of the Palestinian territories of the West Bank and East al-Quds.

Holocaust Industries, Inc., ignores its own latest witness

Shoah Biz

Serge Klarsfeld informs us that at Auschwitz 1,000 Jews deported from France were gassed... in bed!

By Robert Faurisson
With two years’ delay I’ve learned at last this news about Auschwitz which, as of late 2010, should have made headlines around the world and forced historians of “the Holocaust” or “the Shoah” to revise their vulgate on the extermination of the Jews. Strangely, all the media kept quiet about it. Had they for once, this time, felt that it was a case of wild imaginings taken just too far?

Serge Klarsfeld vouches for it: in September 1942, at Auschwitz, one thousand Jews deported from France by “Vichy” were gassed ... in their beds!

I do not recall ever having noted such information in the two fat volumes of his Vichy-Auschwitz (Paris, Fayard, 544 pages in 1983 and 415 pages in 1985). For me this is a novelty, discovered in a little book that a particularly astute revisionist lady has just given me, pointing out the passage that intrigued her. Entitled Pie XII et la Shoah / Le choix du silence?, the 86-page booklet was composed by Ph. Chenaux, S. Klarsfeld, G. Krupp and M. Viot under the direction of Mgr. Dominique Le Tourneau (Paris, Pierre Téqui editor, 2011). It is in fact a compendium of those authors’ papers for a brief seminar on “Pius XII and the Jews. His influence on Vatican II,” held in Paris in November 2010.

Bringing up a deportation of Romanian Jews in 1942, S. Klarsfeld, for his part, writes: “Vichy gives its assent. During the night, the prefecture of police [of Paris] takes out the files on the Jews concerned: on the morning of September 24, 1,500 Romanian Jews are arrested; the next day 1,000 are deported and, after a thirty-six-hour journey to Auschwitz, gassed in their beds” (p. 45-46). Two lines afterwards he is conferring honors on Father Patrick Desbois, a holy prankster if ever there was one (<http://robertfaurisson.blogspot.it/>)

No document is mentioned. No reference. Where the devil, at Auschwitz, would this crime have been committed? Even Danuta Czech, in her famous Auschwitz Chronicle, refrained from mentioning this form of “gassing in bed,” although she hardly lacked audacity, being the one who declared “gassed” certain convoys which were later found, in reality, to have been sent on to other camps after a quarantine at Auschwitz.

Syria prepares major assault on militants

presstv.ir
Hundreds of the members of the terrorist Free Syrian Army and al-Nusra Front are reported to have holed up in Yarmuk refugee camp over the past days, committing acts of violence against the camp’s residents.

“Soldiers have amassed in large numbers and are preparing a military operation to cleanse the camp,” al-Watan newspaper said.

Conflicting stories

The United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) says the population of the camp had halved by December 18.

Opposition sources claimed that on the previous Sunday government forces had bombed Yarmuk, but the Syrian military immediately rejected the claim, saying it only targeted Salafist insurgents holed up in the camp.

Some reports said armed men affiliated with the al-Nusra Front executed a number of Palestinian civilians in the refugee camp.

Syria has been experiencing unrest since March 2011. Many people including large numbers of army and security personnel have been killed in the turmoil.

The Syrian government says the chaos is being orchestrated from outside the country, and there are reports that a very large number of the militants operating in the country are foreign nationals.

AP stonewalling legit questions

Some people in communications don't really wish to communicate.

By Carolyn Yeager

My latest phone call on the morning of Monday, December 3, to the Associated Press office in New York brought the following results: The answerer, upon hearing my name, connected me right away to Corporate Communications, where I spoke to the same woman I spoke with the previous Monday, November 26. I identified myself and told her I had re-sent the first email from November 8 (rather than the second one from November 14) as she requested but did not receive any acknowledgment of receipt from anyone. She said she had forwarded it to the proper parties, but wasn't guaranteed there would be a reply. In answer to my persistent questions, to which she finally gave her name as "Lauren," though she would not give me a last name, she added the information that the email was forwarded to "the journalist and the news editor." Lauren would not reveal the name of the news editor. Thus the road forward on this issue is being "stonewalled" by the guilty. As we know, they are able to write and publish tons of prose about the impossible stories of the "survivors" of the "Holocaust," but go deaf, dumb and blind when it comes to answering simple questions of fact concerning these stories. Let's take a look at what they are actually guilty of.

"Middle East's only democracy" set to ban Arab parties

By David Duke
davidduke.com

Jewish Supremacists always preface their description of Israel with the words "the Middle East's only democracy" – but this, like everything else they say, is just a lie, as a new move to ban at least two Arab-Israeli parties from taking part in upcoming elections has shown. The move to ban the Balad (National Democratic Alliance) and the United Arab

List-Ta'al Party has been prepared with the filing of several motions filed with the Central Election Committee to disqualify a Balad member of the Knesset and to prevent either of those two parties from even taking part in elections. The reason for the "Middle East's only democracy" to ban these parties is their policies. According to the Balad party program, it wants to transform the State of Israel "into a

Afghan policemen defect to Taliban in Badghis Province

Members of the Afghan national police force are shown at right. A group of these national police officers in the western province of Badghis have defected to join the Taliban militants. According to local officials, at least ten Afghan police officers defected to the militant group on December 23 after they had left a police station in Chehl-Gazi area at the Abkamari district. However, the Taliban have not confirmed the report. A local security official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the officers also took weapons and ammunition.

Residents in Abkamari say the defection had been pre-planned.

Increasing resistance

In July, some 20 Afghan police officers defected to the Taliban following a dispute with Australian soldiers in Chahar Chino district of the southern province of Uruzgan. The United States and its allies invaded Afghanistan in 2001 to set in motion Washington's so-called war on terror. That offensive removed the Taliban from power, but insecurity remains across the country despite the presence of thousands of foreign forces.

Chechens to Syria via U. K.

presstv.ir

Chechen militants have left Britain for Turkey in order to join the militants fighting against the government of Syrian President Bashar al-Assad.

Gun controllers' hired guns

A group of 39 militants from Chechnya left London's Heathrow airport last month for Istanbul to filter into Syria across the Turkish borders and join the foreign-backed militants in Syria, Fars News Agency reported. This comes as the Syrian government has repeatedly stated that foreign-backed "terrorists" are responsible for the unrest in the country, which broke out in 2011, and that certain Arab and Western countries are fueling the violence.

Recent reports revealed that the U. K. and the United States had organized training for hundreds of militants in Jordan on how to use light and heavy weapons including sophisticated anti-aircraft weapons. Earlier in November, Syrian newspaper Al Watan also published the names of 142 militants from 18 countries killed while fighting against Syrian forces. The list included 47 Saudis, 24 Libyans, 10 Tunisians, 11 Afghans, nine Egyptians, six Qataris, five Lebanese, five Turks and a number of insurgents from Chad, Chechnya and Azerbaijan. Bit player in the Great Game Analysts believe that Chechnya wants to attract the support of Western States by sending terrorists into Syria while Russia has opposed this Western drive to oust Assad.

Russia has been fighting militants since the mid-1990s in its North Caucasus region where the republics of Chechnya, Dagestan and Ingushetia have been the scenes of sporadic attacks and militant clashes. Violence first broke out in Chechnya in 1994, when 250,000 people were forced to flee to neighboring territories because of a war between Chechen separatists and the Russian army.

Albany County Sheriff's Deputy Stan Lenic understands the Constitution, and his stand on its behalf has made him an overnight internet sensation. Lenic was called in to the Albany (N.Y.) International Airport recently to resolve a growing confrontation between the airport's PR hack Doug Myers and a couple of activists handing out flyers informing airline passengers of their right to opt out of the airport's naked body scanners. Myers tried to get them to stop handing out flyers and videotaping their activities.

Myers made the two move to a new location, then accused them of blocking traffic even while standing where he told them to stand. In an obvious intimidation tactic, Myers demanded their identification – even though videographer Jason Bermas gave Myers his name several times – and told Lenic to get their IDs and, with a wink, said to give their information to him. Lenic told Myers the two did not have to produce IDs. "Obviously this is your Constitutional right, okay?" Lenic told Ashley Jessica and Jason Bermas. "As far as you're concerned, you're not breaking any laws. That's what I want to get across to you guys."

Sudden hero

After Bermas posted the video to YouTube, it went viral. The Albany County Sheriff's Department began getting calls and emails from across the nation commending Lenic's actions in defense of the First Amendment. A Facebook page for Lenic was up within hours. Lenic got it right and deserves all the accolades he receives for his actions.

Obama and Biden are war criminals under U. N. Charter

U. S. President Barack Obama and Vice President Joe Biden should face charges of war crimes for the continuation of war in Afghanistan and Iraq, says an award-winning American investigative journalist.

Dave Lindorff, a contributor to Press TV website, quoted international law expert Francis Boyle as saying that President Obama and his administration are engaged in an “ongoing criminal conspiracy under international law” both to cover up and protect criminals like his predecessor George W. Bush.

Bush and many of his appointees were convicted at a tribunal in the Malaysian capital, Kuala Lumpur, last month of war crimes in connection with the invasion of Iraq and Afghanistan.

“Bug splats”

Some dead children are mourned; others are dehumanized.

By George Monbiot

Barack Obama’s tears for the children of Newtown are in stark contrast to his silence over the children murdered by his drones “Mere words cannot match the depths of your sorrow, nor can they heal your wounded hearts... These tragedies must end. And to end them, we must change.”¹ Every parent can connect with what Barack Obama said about the murder of 20 children in Newtown, Connecticut. There can scarcely be a person on earth with access to the media who is untouched by the grief of the people of that town.

By extension

It must follow that what applies to the children murdered there by a deranged young man also applies to the children murdered in Pakistan by a somber American president. These children are just as important, just as real, just as deserving of the world’s concern. Yet there are no presidential speeches or presidential tears for them; no pictures on the front pages of the world’s newspapers; no interviews with grieving relatives; no minute analysis of what happened and why.

If the victims of Mr. Obama’s drone strikes are mentioned by the State at all, they are discussed in terms which suggest that they are less than human. The people who operate the drones, Rolling Stone magazine reports, describe their casualties as “bug splats,” “since viewing the body through a grainy-green video image gives the sense of an insect being crushed.”² Or they are reduced to vegetation: justifying the drone war, Obama’s counterterrorism adviser Bruce Riedel explained that “you’ve got to mow the lawn all the time. The minute you stop mowing, the grass is going to grow back.”³

Like Bush’s government in Iraq, Barack Obama’s administration neither documents nor acknowledges the civilian casualties of the CIA’s drone strikes in northwest Pakistan. But a report by the law schools at Stanford and New York universities suggests that during the first three years of his time in office, the 259 strikes for which he is ultimately responsible killed between 297 and 569 civilians, of whom 64 were children.⁴ These are figures extracted from peace” (invading a country that does not pose an imminent threat to the attacker), and torture, are war crimes in and of themselves,” wrote Lindorff, who has authored The Case for Impeachment about the Bush administration.

The United States and its allies invaded Afghanistan in 2001 as part of Washington’s so-called war on terror.

The offensive removed the Taliban from power, but led to years of invasion, and insecurity is rising across the country despite the presence of thousands of foreign troops in Afghanistan.

The U. S.-led war in Afghanistan, which has caused record-high civilian and military casualties, has become the longest military conflict in American history.

U. S.-led forces also attacked Iraq in 2003 and toppled Iraq’s former dictator Saddam Hussein on the pretext of his possessing weapons of mass destruction (WMD), but no WMD was ever discovered in Iraq. At credible reports: there may be more which have not been fully documented.

The wider effects on the children of the region have been devastating. Many have been withdrawn from school because of fears that large gatherings of any kind are being targeted. There have been several strikes on schools since George W. Bush launched the drone program that Obama has expanded so enthusiastically: one of Bush’s blunders killed 69 children.⁵

The study reports that children scream in terror when they hear the sound of a drone. A local psychologist says that their fear and the horrors they witness is causing permanent mental scarring. Children wounded in drone attacks told the researchers that they are too traumatized to go back to school and have abandoned hopes of the careers they might have had: their dreams as well as their bodies have been broken.⁶

Trigger man is a mystery

Obama does not kill children deliberately. But their deaths are an inevitable outcome of the way his drones are deployed. We don’t know what emotional effect these deaths might have on him, as neither he nor his officials will discuss the matter: almost everything to do with the CIA’s extrajudicial killings in Pakistan is kept secret. But you get the impression that no one in the administration is losing much sleep over it.

Two days before the murders in Newtown, Obama’s press secretary was asked about women and children being killed by drones in Yemen and Pakistan. He refused to answer, on the grounds that such matters are “classified.”⁷ Instead, he directed the drone program and has said nothing about its killing of children. The only statement I can find is a brief and vague response during a videoconference last January.¹² The killings have been left to others to justify. In October Democratic cheerleader Joe Klein claimed on MSNBC that “the bottom line in the end is whose 4-year-old gets killed? What we’re doing is limiting the possibility that 4-year-olds here will get killed by indiscriminate acts of terror.”¹³ As the estimable Glenn Greenwald has pointed out, killing 4-year-olds is what terrorists do.¹⁴ It doesn’t prevent retaliatory murders; it encourages them, as grief and revenge are often accomplices.

Media insects know insects

Most of the world’s media, which have rightly commemorated the children of Newtown, either ignore Obama’s murders or accept the official version that all those killed are “militants.” The children of northwest Pakistan, it seems, are not like our children. They have no names, no pictures, no memorials of candles and flowers and teddy bears. They belong to the other: to the non-human world of bugs and grass and tissue.

“Are we,” Obama asked on December 16, “prepared to say that such violence visited on our children year after year after year is somehow the price of our freedom?”¹⁵ It’s a valid question. He should apply it to the violence he is visiting on the children of Pakistan.

Some Northerners reject lawless seizures

Cutting through the silence on what that invasion was truly about, the last real American President, Jefferson Davis, said: “A question settled by violence or in disregard of law remains unsettled.”

By John Peeples
firstfreedom.net

Coercion The Alternative to Secession.—Repudiation of it by the Constitution and the Fathers of the Constitutional Era

From his great work, The Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government, President Jefferson Davis speaks...

Early in the session of the Convention which formed the Constitution, it was proposed to confer upon Congress the power “to call forth the force of the Union against any member of the Union failing to fulfill its duty under the articles thereof.” When this proposition came to be considered, Mr. Madison observed that “a union of the States containing such an ingredient seemed to provide for its own destruction. The use of force against a State would look more like a declaration of war than an infliction of punishment, and would probably be considered by the party attacked as a dissolution of all previous compacts by which it might be bound. He hoped that such a system would be framed as might render this recourse unnecessary, and moved that the clause be postponed.” This motion was adopted nem. con., and the proposition was never again revived. Again, on a subsequent occasion, speaking of an appeal to force, Mr. Madison said: “Was such a remedy eligible? Was it practicable? ... Any government for the United States, formed on the supposed practicability of using force against the unconstitutional proceedings of the States, would prove as visionary and fallacious as the government of Congress.” Every proposition looking in any way to the same or a similar object was promptly rejected by the convention. George Mason, of Virginia, said of such a proposition: “Will not the citizens of the invaded State assist one another, until they rise as one man and shake off the Union altogether?”

Other witnesses

Oliver Ellsworth, in the ratifying Convention of Connecticut, said: “This Constitution does not attempt to coerce sovereign bodies, States, in their political capacity. No coercion is applicable to such bodies, but that of an armed force. If we should attempt to execute the laws of the Union by sending an armed force against a delinquent State, it would involve the good and bad, the innocent and guilty, in the same calamity.”

Mr. Hamilton, in the Convention of New York, said: “[T]o coerce the States is one of the maddest projects that was ever devised. A failure of compliance will never be confined to a single State; this being the case, can we suppose it wise to hazard a civil war? Suppose Massachusetts or any large State should refuse, and Congress should attempt to compel them, would they not have influence to procure assistance, especially from those States who are in the same situation as themselves? What a picture does this idea present to our view! A complying State at war with a non-complying State; Congress marching the troops of one State into the bosom of another; this State collecting auxiliaries and forming perhaps a majority against its federal head. Here is a nation at war with itself!”

Mr. Davis continues: “Unhappily, our generation has seen that, in the decay of the principles and feelings which animated the hearts of all patriots in that day, this thing, like many others then regarded as impossible dreams, has been only too feasible, and that States have permitted themselves to be used as instruments, not merely for the coercion, but for the destruction of the freedom and independence of their sister States.”

Edmund Randolph, Governor of Virginia, although the mover of the original proposition to authorize the employment of the forces of the Union against a delinquent member, which had been so signally defeated in the federal convention, afterward, in the Virginia convention, made an eloquent protest against the idea of the employment of force against a State. “What species of military coercion,” said he, “could the General Government adopt for the enforcement of obedience to its demands? Either an army sent into the heart of a delinquent State, or blocking up its ports. Have we lived to this, then, that, in order to suppress and exclude tyranny, it is necessary to render the most affectionate friends the most bitter enemies, set the father against the son, and make the brother slay the brother? Is this the happy expedient that is to preserve liberty? Will it not destroy it? If an army be once introduced to force us, if once marched into Virginia, figure to yourselves what the dreadful consequence will be: the most lamentable civil war must ensue.”

Rule of law

Mr. Davis: “We have seen already how vehemently the idea of even judicial coercion was repudiated by Hamilton, Marshall, and others. The suggestion of military coercion was uniformly treated, as in the above extracts, with still more abhorrence. No principle was more fully and firmly settled on the highest authority than that, under our system, there could be no coercion of a State.”

Shortly before the War of Northern Aggression began, Lincoln’s predecessor, President James Buchanan, asked the U. S. Attorney General for an official opinion on whether the United States could invade the seceding States and force them to obey the laws of the United States. In his response of November 20, 1860, Attorney General Jeremiah Black issued several opinions as to what the U. S. (federal government) might do legally. The President learned he could not invade the seceding States under powers granted him by the Constitution, and an illegal invasion by Congress would dissolve the entire Union. Attorney General Black went on to say that Congress had no power to displace that of the States. “Reconstruction” and “displacement” stand synonymous here. Attorney General Black emphasized that the only legal way was to accuse and bring them before a Court of law.

First and absolutely foremost, the attacks and invasions of the Southern States were

A sane President’s position

PROVISION 228, Bill of Rights, from the Fifth Amendment: No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law.

Due process is the legal requirement that the State must respect all of the legal rights that are owed to a person. Due process balances the power of law of the land and protects individual persons from it. When a government harms a person without following the exact course of the law, this constitutes a due-process violation, which offends against the rule of law.

This provision applies not only to the courts but to the legislative and executive branches of the federal government as well. None of these can confiscate property or deprive a person of his life or liberty without due process of law.

Beyond question

Let me reiterate what Attorney General Jeremiah Black stated:

It would be illegal to invade States except by Court order. He further advised that, were the threatened States treated like enemies, they could retaliate in any form considered necessary, and that “...if Congress shall break up the present Union, by unconstitutionally putting strife and enmity and armed hostility between different sections of the country, instead of the domestic tranquility which the Constitution was meant to insure, will not all the States be absolved from their federal obligations? ...then the Union must utterly perish at the moment when Congress shall arm one part of the people against another for any purpose beyond that of merely protecting the general government in the exercise of its proper constitutional functions” (Official Opinions of Attorneys General of the United States, Vol. 9, pages

Idol of today’s new and reconstructed due process

516 and 526). What Attorney General Black said would be the the official opinion of the U. S. government according to Section 25 of the 1789 Judiciary Act.

President Buchanan stated that he did not think States could legally secede, but saw no constitutional authority to stop them with guns of war. As he put it in his message of December 3, 1860 (Attorney General Black having advised him on November 20, 1860): “Congress may possess many means of preserving the Union by conciliation, but the sword was not placed in its hand to preserve it by force.”

The U. S. Supreme Court:

“If you bring these leaders to trial, it will condemn the North, for by the Constitution secession is not a rebellion. His [Jefferson Davis] capture was a mistake. His trial will be a greater one. We cannot convict him of treason.” – Salmon P. Chase, Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, 1867

Such a trial could result in restoring the illegally usurped constitutional government of the Confederate States of America. For Lincoln undeniably caused over 600,000 deaths and wasted billions of dollars on an aggressive war which the U. S. Congress initiated and has yet to honestly assess. The issue remains unsettled 151 years later!

Practitioner of power plays

Let’s have a look at Cuomo’s record of destruction:

Andrew Cuomo ordered affirmative action mortgages for Blacks and Latinos. He even called the mortgages “affirmative action,” in a press conference explicitly stating that banks would be required to “aggressively” give mortgages to Black applicants even if they don’t qualify for the mortgage they are applying for.

When asked if his policy would increase foreclosures, he said: “I’m sure there will be a higher default rate.” Cuomo knew that a higher default rate would damage the housing industry, the economy and Black families who would be given affirmative action mortgages they hadn’t qualified for.

“Evil Eyes” Cuomo stated “Confiscation could be an option. Mandatory sale to the State could be an option. Permitting could be an option – keep your gun but permit it.” In other words, Cuomo wants to enact a huge crippling tax on all lawfully owned firearms. Illegal guns possessed by the gangbangers and illegal aliens would not be affected. Those who cannot afford the new tax would have their lawfully owned firearms confiscated by force. Johnny Horton popularized the song “North to Alaska” back in the 1960s. His snappy tune was about the gold rush. Today, there remain many other reasons to foresee a time in the future when it will be in the White man’s very survival interest to migrate up into those frostbitten lands of the northern hemisphere.

Thinking ahead

This physical relocation may become necessary for our race to avoid extinction during the violent tsunami of Black racial hatred that looms before us. A person would have to be mentally disabled to miss hearing something about the numerous unprovoked Black on White attacks in Rhodesia, South Africa, Europe, and all across the U. S.

There is so much material in the most recent history I have read, that a brief book review cannot do it justice. Swiss native Paul Henri Mallet wrote the first edition in French. His work, Northern Antiquities; or, An Historical Account of the Manners, Customs, Religion and Laws, Maritime Expeditions and Discoveries, Language and Literature of the Ancient Scandinavians, (Danes, Swedes, Norwegians and Icelanders) with Incidental Notices Respecting our Saxon Ancestors, was written in 1756.

Bishop Percy translated the French into English in 1770. It was republished in 1847 with editing by I. A. Blackwell. My own hardbound copy was published in 1890. It contains 578 pages with one color illustration. A copy of this book can be found at the website www.abebooks.com.

In short, it appears that the Norsemen/Vikings probably originated in central Asia, as they appear to have retained some Persian concepts due to ancient contact with those Indo-Europeans. These tough Aryan people migrated slowly northward, settling in the countries of Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

The Norsemen were fierce fighters, adventurers, pirates, sailors and raiders. It was amazing to read that they had actually sailed up the Seine River all the way to Paris. Some of them founded settlements in Normandy, while England also became a homeland for the Angles and Saxons bringing Teutonic blood.

They discovered and peopled the forlorn, volcanic island of Iceland during these raiding expeditions. Greenland was their next hop westward. From Norse oral and recorded history, they appear also to have occupied for limited periods of time areas in Labrador, Newfoundland and even New England.

Heroic

Odin – or Woden – was the Scandinavian/Teutonic pagan figure of the all-powerful father god, creator of the lesser gods such as Thor, the god of war. Such pagan beliefs prevailed even after Christians had come converting in the ninth century.

From page 468: “The faith professed by the great body of the people was simply this, that all who died with arms in their hands, no matter what had been their moral conduct throughout life, would partake of the boisterous joys of Valhalla – would have the pleasure of daily hewing each other to pieces, and then, to use the words of the Edda, ‘sit down and drink ale with the AEsir;’ whilst those who died a natural death would descend to the cold and cheerless regions of Hela, which were, however, by no means regarded as a place of punishment, the sojourn in them being merely a negation of that rude kind of celestial bliss reserved for the chosen heroes.”

Faithful

Tacitus, the Roman historian of the 2nd century A.D., recorded that the Germanic tribes were in general loyal to their marriage vows, unlike Romans of his day.

In comparing the treatment of the female sex in the East to that in the North, the author states on page 199: “We find the reverse of all this among the northern nations, who did not so much consider the other sex as made for their pleasure, as to be their equals and companions, whose esteem, as valuable as their other favours, could only be obtained by constant attentions, by generous services, and by a proper exertion of virtue and courage. I conceive that this will at first sight be deemed a paradox, and that it will not be an easy matter to reconcile a manner of thinking which supposes so much delicacy, with the rough, unpolished character of this people. Yet I believe the observation is so well grounded that one may venture to assert that it is this same people who have contributed to diffuse through all Europe that spirit of equity, of moderation, and generosity shown by the stronger to the weaker sex, which is at this day the distinguishing characteristic of European manners; nay, that we even owe to them that spirit of gallantry which was so little known to the Greeks and Romans, how polite soever in other respects.”

The cold North was the fatherland of our Aryan race gifted with courage, honor and respect for women. Today, those cold lands remain mostly White and unappealing to the darker races.

But today we fail to maintain any State, county, section, city, village, subdivision or even our own property as “White only.” How did it come to this? “Our” corrupt leaders will taxpayer-finance hundreds of snitches drawn from the CIA, FBI, BATF and IRS alphabet soup to infiltrate and destroy attempts by Aryans to separate us from the melted shards of humanity.

Alaska does have an active secession movement which has been ignored/censored by the Zionist-controlled press. Perhaps in the future if that large, sparsely populated State does secede it may become one of those last frontiers for Whitey and his kin.

It is a woeful theory that the northern lands were the Alpha and could become the Omega for our race.

North to Alaska; go north, the rush is on!

EDITOR’S NOTE

Colonel Hitt offers some fine ideas, but, rather than just run from Blacks and Mestizos, we must also organize more vigilantly, fight back, flush out and deal with those whose anti-White propaganda has lured killers among us, inciting them with images of how “easy” are Aryan women and soft we men. Let’s bring our heavy weaponry of truth up front, disabuse Zionists of their invincibility complex, offshore those who can’t live with Whites in charge and restore some order. As the skeer turns 180 degrees about, let us convene the Nuremberg style trials.

Feminism is a mental illness.

Chivalry is back in the news. The always-alert Charles Murray of the American Enterprise Institute notes this in the Psychology of Women Quarterly. A new study on what the authors are pleased to call “benevolent sexism” (which, as Murray translates, seems to mean gentlemanly behavior) found that both women and men are happier when men behave like gentlemen.

This being a sociological publication, though, the findings are not written in English, but rather in academic argot. It’s full of sentences like this: “A structural equation model revealed that benevolent sexism was positively associated with diffuse system justification within a sample of 274 college women and 111 college men.”

If you spend more than $100,000 on an undergraduate and graduate education in women’s studies, you can learn to be this impenetrable, too.

The authors of the study were quick to warn readers about what they’d discovered. “Our findings reinforce the dangerous nature of benevolent sexism and emphasize the need for interventions to reduce its prevalence.” Right. Though it seems to increase the life satisfaction of both sexes, it must still be eradicated.

When feminists set out to remake the sexes back in the 1970s, they seemed to choose all the wrong traits to emulate and/or eliminate. Women were encouraged to match the promiscuity, aggressiveness and irresponsibility of men. In other words, women were to model themselves on the worst men. Meanwhile, the best traits of traditional men – specifically their most chivalrous and protective impulses – were to be maligned, mocked, and resented.

Still dancing on Mitt Romney’s political grave, feminist writer Gina Barreca told the Washington Post’s Gene Weingarten that Romney would be a “terrible, terrible date.” (Leave it to a feminist who wants women to be taken seriously to evaluate a presidential candidate as a potential date.)

Why? Because he’d be chivalrous. “Chivalry is the opposite of good manners. It’s infantilizing. It’s contempt masquerading as politeness. The chivalrous guy is establishing roles; he is the protector, you are Limoges. Your job is to let him be masterful. In my experience, when you are standing on a pedestal, there’s not much room to move around. That’s by design.”

Emily Esfahani Smith isn’t buying the chivalry as disguised power grab line. Writing in The Atlantic, she notes (as Rich Lowry has highlighted) the contrast between the Titanic and the Costa Concordia – two sinkings 100 years apart. Three quarters of the women on the Titanic survived, while three quarters of the men died. In 1912, men would’ve been ashamed of themselves if they failed to protect women – even at the cost of their lives. Was that just “contempt masquerading as politeness”? On the Costa Concordia, early in 2012, men shoved women aside to get into the lifeboats. Oh well, at least the women had more room to move around than on that darn pedestal.

Smith reminds us that chivalry arose in response to the violence and barbarism of the Middle Ages. “It cautioned men to temper their aggression, deploying it only in appropriate circumstances – like to protect the physically weak and defenseless members of society.” Obviously many men failed to fulfill the ideal. We’ve always had boorish behavior. But wasn’t it preferable to label boorish behavior as such, rather than celebrate it as a victory for sexual equality?

The chivalric code persists to this day, despite the best efforts of the feminists. When a shooter opened fire at an Aurora movie theater, no fewer than three young men protected their girlfriends from bullets with their own bodies – and died in the process.

Smith includes an anecdote that sums up the case for chivalry. Samuel Proctor, pastor of Harlem’s Abyssinian Baptist Church, tipped his hat to a lady. She was offended and demanded, “What is that supposed to mean?”

He replied: “Madame, by tipping my hat I was telling you several things. That I would not harm you in any way. That if someone came into this elevator and threatened you, I would defend you. That if you fell ill, I would tend to you and if necessary carry you to safety. I was telling you that even though I am a man and physically stronger than you, I will treat you with both respect and solicitude.

“But, frankly, Madame, it would have taken too much time to tell you all of that; so, instead, I just tipped my hat.”

Are you still wondering if Marxist Barack Obama is a communist? Are you wondering why our once wonderful America is being torn to pieces from within by comrade Obama and his commie thugs? The answers to the above questions and more are in the DVDs listed below. Knowledge is power, and it’s time for this knowledge to be revealed to “We the People.”

Are the Jews victims or persecutors?

Shall we remain as heedless of what this inventor/writer warned our forebears about, or is it finally time to face the challenging facts?

By Henry Ford

The Dearborn Independent, 11 June 1921

“Half of Christendom worships a Jew; the other half worships a Jewess.”

— Jewish editorial.

“If the gospel story is correct, Judas was a pretty decent sort of fellow. It was only after he had become a convert to Christianity that he became that which has made his memory an accursed thing for nineteen hundred years.”

— Jewish editorial.

“Our land is frequently called a Christian nation. No doubt the majority of our citizens believe this. No less an authority than Justice Brewer of the Supreme Court so expressed himself in 1892. But the statement is clearly false... This is not a Christian nation. In inspiration, at least, it is a Hebrew nation, for the Constitution which we now enjoy traces back to the Hebrew Commonwealth.”

— Jewish editorial.

Semantics

(From the minutes of a meeting of the Committee on Families of the New York Board of Child Welfare.)

Mr. Hebbard: “That is one of the things I have in mind, that a widow brings deliberately into her home a nameless child and the inevitable consequence of that is that her legitimate children are always thereafter pointed out.”

Miss Sophie Irene Loeb: “As far as nameless children are concerned, Christ himself was a nameless child. Let us get away from nameless children.”

Dr. Dirvoch: “I think where there are three or four children in a home and a little stranger enters that home without a father, you are corrupting the morals of those legitimate children by permitting them to remain in such surroundings.”

Miss Loeb: “I say to you that this committee, if it takes such an attitude as that, is one hundred years behind the times.”

Mr. Cunnion: “Anything against purity is immoral.”

Miss Loeb: “What has that to do with the question of purity? Was the mother of Christ pure?”

Mr. Cunnion: “Certainly.”

Miss Loeb: “He had no name!”

Mr. Cunnion: “You can’t bring that in here. We believe he was conceived without sin.”

Mr. Menehan (to Miss Loeb): “That is very wrong to make that statement.” — Cited in a letter of complaint to Mayor Hylan.

“The intimate relation of Church and State in the great non-sectarian United States of America received direct demonstration on August 12 (1913), when a deputy sargeant-at-arms of the Senate was hurriedly sent out to get a preacher of any old denomination to open the Senate with prayer. The session opening an hour earlier than usual, the regular chaplain as not at hand, but with still two minutes to spare the deputy returned in an automobile, hurried to the Vice President’s office and introduced the Rev. Dr. C. Albert Homas, of Canonsburg, Pennsylvania, to Mr. Marshall just in time for the Vice President to lead the way into the Senate chamber to open the session at 11 o’clock, and once again the Union was saved. We shudder to think what might have happened if no preacher had been captured in time to open the session with prayer!” — Jewish editorial.

“President Wilson in his inaugural address said: ‘The firm basis of the Government is justice, not pity.’ This is sound Jewish doctrine as laid down by Moses and the Prophets in contradistinction to the doctrine of love, as attributed to Jesus. This coming from so good a churchman as President Wilson might be a little surprising were it not that it is a well-known fact that whenever our Christian brethren want to talk to reasoning men they go to the Old Testament for their inspiration.”

— Jewish editorial.

“President Wilson at his inaugural gave another instance of the well-known fact that in solemn moments when they need comfort and inspiration, Christians turn to the Old Testament and not to the New. So President Wilson, when he kissed the bible after taking the inaugural oath, selected the passage, Psalm 46.”

— Jewish editorial.

“Reference has frequently been made in these columns to a number of addresses made by the late Isaac M. Wise at the celebration in honor of his 80th birthday anniversary in the course of which he predicted that in a quarter of a century from that date (1899) there would be practically nothing left in Protestant Christianity of a belief in the divinity of Jesus Christ or the distinctive dogmas of Christianity, and that all Protestant Christians by whatever name they call themselves, would be substantially Jews in belief. To any one who notes the signs of the times, it is apparent that this prophecy is being rapidly fulfilled The Jesus superstition and the fantastic dogmas built upon his supposed divine origin, die but slowly, but that they are dying is nevertheless apparent.” — Jewish editorial.

Who’s attacking whom?

The subject of this article is “Religious Prejudice and Persecution – Are the Jews Victims or Persecutors?” A study of history and of contemporary Jewish journalism shows that Jewish prejudice and persecution is a continuous phenomenon wherever the Jews have attained power, and that in neither action nor word has any disability placed upon the Jew equaled the disabilities he has placed and still contemplates placing upon non-Jews. It is a rather startling reversal of all that we have learned from our Judaized histories, but nevertheless, it seems to be the truth.

Attention is once more called to the fact that the Jews themselves are not raising the cry of “religious persecution” here or elsewhere, but they are allowing their “Gentile fronts” to do it for them – just as they have not denied the statements made in this series (among themselves they freely admit most of them) but let “Gentile fronts” do it for them. The Jews would not be averse to raising the cry of “religious persecution” perhaps, (provided they could make it stand) were they not afraid that it would call attention to their own persecuting activities. But their “Gentile fronts” have brought that upon them.

Nondiscriminatory, sort of

There is no Christian church that the Jews have not repeatedly attacked.

They have attacked the Catholic Church. This is of special interest just now when Jewish agents are doing their utmost to arouse Catholic sentiment in their favor by circulating charges which these agents personally know to be false. The Dearborn Independent has perfect confidence in the information which Catholic leaders may have on the Jewish Question. On this subject the Catholic priesthood is not misled.

Examples of this attack are numerous. “Half of Christendom worships a Jewess,” is not a statement but a slur, flung by Jewish men who say in the ritual of morning prayer: “Blessed art thou, O Lord our God, King of the Universe, who hast not made me a woman.” The Talmudists’ discussions of the Virgin Mother are often vile. The Christian festivals, whose preservation is due to the Catholic custom and conscience, are all attacked by Jews.

The American Israelite, whose great prestige in American Jewry is due to its having been founded by Rabbi Isaac M. Wise, opposed the establishment of Columbus Day and berated Governor Hughes for signing the law making it a holiday in New York. The act that established it deserved “the contempt of thinking men.” Why? Is not the discovery of America a memorable event? Yes, but Columbus was a Catholic! However, in recent months the Jews are proving him to have been a Jew, so we may expect some day to see Columbus Day insisted upon with Jewish rites.

Chutzpah-pah-pah

The Catholic Columbian made editorial reference to the increasing Jewish influence on the American press, in these words: “Jewry is getting its grip on the news of this country as it is on Reuter’s and the Havas agency in Europe.” — A perfectly polite and true observation.

But the Jewish editorial thunderer came back – “The Columbian, in its sneaking Jesuitical way, does not mention the fact that these (the Jewish) papers are the very cleanest in the country. The Columbian cannot point to a single daily owned by one of its co-religionists that begins to compare with the above papers.”

The sweet spirit here evidenced is very significant today when an appeal is being made to create a strong pro-Jewish Catholic sentiment.

If there is in the world any extra-ecclesiastical undertaking by Catholics which has won the undivided approval of the Christian world as the Passion Play of Oberammergau has done, the present writer does not know what it is. Yet in a volume entitled “A Rabbi’s Impressions of the Oberammergau Passion Play,” Rabbi Joseph Krauskopf, D.D., of Philadelphia has stigmatized that notable production as reeking with falsehoods and vicious anti-Semitism. In the rabbi’s eyes, of course, it is, for to him the entire Christian tradition is a poisonous lie. The whole fabric of Christian truth, specially as it concerns the person of Christ, are “the hallucinations of emotional men and hysterical women.”

“Thus,” says the rabbi (p. 127) “was invented the cruel story that has caused more misery, more innocent suffering, than any other work of fiction in the range of the whole world’s literature.” And thus the simple peasants of Oberammergau, presenting the Catholic faith in reverent pageant, are labeled anti-Semites.

These are not isolated instances. Antagonism to the Catholic Church runs throughout Jewish literature.

The Jewish attitude was summed up in an editorial in the Jewish Sentinel of November 26, 1920, as follows: “Our only great historical enemy, our most dangerous enemy, is Rome in all its shapes and forms, and in all its ramifications. Whenever the sun of Rome begins to set, that of Jerusalem rises.” These, however, are matters well known to Catholic leaders.

In their turn the other Christian denominations have been attacked. When the Methodist Church put on a great pageant entitled “The Wayfarer,” Rabbi Stephen S. Wise played critic and made the solemn and silly statement that had he been a South Sea Islander (instead of the itinerant platform performer which he is) his first impulse after seeing “The Wayfarer,” would have been to rush out into the street and kill at least three Jews. It says a great deal, perhaps, for the channel in which Rabbi Wise’s impulses run, but the tens of thousands of Methodists who saw “The Wayfarer” will not be inclined to attribute such a criticism to the spirit of tolerance which Rabbi Wise so zealously counsels the Christians to observe.

Gentiles unqualified?

The Episcopal Church also has felt the attack of the Jews. Recently the Jewish press raised a clamor that the Episcopal Church was not competent to teach Americanism in our cities because it held that Christianity and good citizenship were synonymous. And when the Episcopal Church made provision for mission work among the Jews, the torrent of abuse that was poured out gave a very vivid picture of what the Jewish mind naturally turns to when aroused. This abuse is not reproduced here because of its excessive violence and disrespect. It is similar to that which is heaped upon all attempts to explain Christianity to the Jews. “What would the Gentiles do if we sent Jewish missionaries to them?” ask the violent editors. Any Gentile can answer that – nay, even the Jews can answer that. In the first place, the Jews do not want to teach their religion to Gentiles because there is a Talmudical restriction against it; Talmudically the Gentiles are not good enough to mingle with the religious matters of the Jews. In the second place, the Jews do send missionaries everywhere, not to spread Jewish religious principles, but propaganda favoring the Jews as a race and people, as is done in our colleges through the so-called “Jewish Chautauqua.” In the third place, let there be produced one Jewish missionary who has ever received anything but considerate reception wherever he has appeared.

The Jews are bitter against all Christian denominations because of the conversion of numerous Jews to them. A large number of Jews have become Catholics; one of the Knights of Columbus’ most useful lecturers against the menace of radical socialism is a converted Jew. It is so also with the Presbyterian Church which has been the most recent victim of Jewish vituperation. But only upon the Catholic Church has the Jew poured more wrath and malediction than he has poured upon Christian Science. The Christian Science church has attracted large numbers of Jewish converts. Some of them have become very active, devoted members of that form of faith. Scores of columns and pages have been devoted to their denunciation in Jewish newspapers, magazines and books. Christian Science is a peculiar anathema to the Jew.

Truth vs. mediacracy

Where then is the religious prejudice? Search through the publications of all the churches named, and you cannot find in all their history so much of the spirit of prejudice and persecution as you can find expressed in the Jewish press in one single day. Jewry reeks with such prejudice. In politics, education, social functions, public holidays, literature, and newspapers, they see everywhere traces of “Christological manifestations” and cry them down.

No public man has ever given public evidence of his Christian faith without rebuke from the Jews. Mr. Bryan, Mr. Marshall, Mr. Taft, Mr. Wilson, two of them Presidents, one of them Vice President, and the other Secretary of State, have all been taken to task from time to time for their sins in this respect. Mr. Marshall is a devout man, whose faith is real to him, and he speaks very naturally about it at times. He has, therefore, been attacked oftener in the Jewish press than has any other public man of recent times. Nothing is more ludicrous to the Jewish press than a Vice President of the United States openly confessing that he is an “idolator,” that is, a worshiper of the dead Jewish imposter whom the Christians ignorantly call “Christ.” To Mr. Marshall’s honor, be it said, he never apologized, he never begged to withdraw his public statements. Neither did William J. Bryan, whose lecture “The Prince of Peace” contained statements in honor of Christ which brought him into conflict with Jewish spokesmen everywhere, and whose remarks about missions after a trip around the world were savagely attacked by Jews. Mr. Bryan did not apologize either. Mr. Taft was promptly called down on several occasions for using forms of the word “Christian,” which were particularly offensive to the Jewish press because they had advertised far and wide the Taft campaign that Mr. Taft was practically a Jew in his belief in that he had abandoned all the distinctive Christian doctrines pertaining to Christ. After his lapses in which he used the term “Christian” approvingly, it was explained on his behalf (1) that he was accommodating himself to the audience, and (2) that he used the term as a synonym for civilization! But isn’t it significant that the name of Christ should be an integral part of the very name of the highest civilization? Mr. Taft was a true liberal, liberal enough to tolerate Christian orthodoxy. And that was a rather weak spot, as far as the Jews’ estimate of him went.

Front man

Mr. Wilson, while President, was very close to the Jews. His administration, as everyone knows, was predominantly Jewish. As a Presbyterian elder, Mr. Wilson had occasional lapses into the Christian mode of thought during his public utterances, and was always checked up tight by his Jewish censors. In 1914, speaking before the American University at Washington, he said:

“That is the reason why scholarship has usually been most fruitful when associated with religion, and scholarship has never been, so far as I can at the moment recall, associated with any religion except the religion of Jesus Christ.”
That was terrible. So terrible that Herman Bernstein was chosen to administer the castigation.

And Mr. Wilson made proper reparation: “My dear Mr. Bernstein: I am sorry that there would have been any unfair implication in what I said at the opening of the American University. You may be sure that there was nothing of the kind in my mind, or very certainly nothing in my thoughts that would discriminate in the important matter you speak of against Judaism. I find that one of the risks and penalties of extemporaneous speaking is that you do not stop to consider the whole field, but address yourself merely to the matter in hand. With sincere respects and appreciation,

Cordially yours,
Woodrow Wilson.”

The heading given this notice in the Jewish press was, “He Did Not Mean It.” All of the President’s offending took place in 1914. The second offense he gave was by taking the position of honorary chairman of the International Lord’s Day Congress, which was to be held the next year in connection with the Panama Exposition. It was, however, the Christian Sunday which received the bulk of the abuse on that occasion.

The subject is “religious prejudice.” Where does it exist in this country in more continuous and virulent character than among the Jews? Read these items selected at random from Jewish papers:

Intolerant chosenites

“District Grand Lodge No. 4, Independent Order B’nai B’rith, voted at the annual election held in San Francisco, March 2 (1911) to exclude from the order Jews who join the Christian Science Church. The body after earnest discussion decided that the portals of the order shall be closed against the Christian Scientist Jews on the ground that such Jews have abjured Judaism. The vote upon the question was almost unanimous.”
“The Jewish Community of Philadelphia has found it necessary to publish a warning to the Jewish people against the Daily

Vacation Bible Schools which are being established in various parts of the city, also against certain missions and settlement houses, all of which are traps into which Jewish children are decoyed for the purpose of seducing them from the religion of their parents. These institutions belong to that class of conversionist agencies which wage a campaign for the seeking of converts through workers . . . (who) are a class of criminals that keep just within the law and deserve no better treatment than is usually accorded to people of that kind.”

When a bishop of the Episcopal Church said, “We must make the United States indisputably a Christian nation,” the Jewish press retorted that such a thing could not be done until the Constitution of the United States had been “abolished.” “Christian America” is a persecuting term according to the professional Jewish spokesmen, and the most laborious efforts have been put forth by them to prove on paper that the United States is not and cannot be Christian.

Not only do the Jews disagree with Christian teaching – which is their perfect right, and no one dare question it – but they seek to interfere with it. It is not religious tolerance in the midst of religious difference, but religious attack that they preach and practice. The whole record of the Jewish opposition to Christmas, Easter and certain patriotic songs shows that.

When Cleveland and Lakewood arranged for a community Christmas, the Cleveland Jewish press said: “The writer of this has no idea how many Jews there are in Lakewood, but if there is only one, there should be no community Christmas, no community religion of any kind.” That is not a counsel of tolerance, it is a counsel of attack. The Christmas literature of American Judaism is fiercer than the flames of the Inquisition. In the month of January, the Jewish press has urged its readers to begin an early campaign against Christmas celebrations the next Christmas – “Only three hundred and sixty days before Christmas. So let us do our Christmas arguing early and take plenty of time to do it.”

Profits pause

If anything, Easter is attacked yet more bitterly. But we refrain, for good reasons, from repeating what Jews commonly say on such occasions. The strange inconsistency of it all is to see the great department stores of the Levys and the Isaacs and the Goldsteins and the Silvermans filled with brilliant Christmas cheer and at Easter with the goods appropriate to the time. The festivals of the “heathen” are very profitable. Jewish merchants have been chided for this – not over-severely – by certain rabbis. But on the whole the rabbis had better remain content, for there are no forces more rapidly secularizing the two festival days than are the merchandising and profiteering forces.

Even religious intolerance has its gleesome moments, and the Jews’ come whenever the signs appear of the greater secularization of the church. One parallel between the Protocols and the real hopes of the Jews is written in the common Jewish prophecy that Christianity is doomed to perish. It will perish by becoming, to all intentions and purposes, Judaism. And it will become Judaism, first, by ousting all the doctrines pertaining to the person of Christ, excising from the Gospels the great “I Ams” which are His distinctive teachings concerning Himself; and, second, by devitalizing Christianity of all the spiritual content which flows from a union by faith with a Person believed to be divine. That is the only way it can be done. There may be a union of all the churches of the Christian faith because the fundamentals are the same; no union of Christianity and Judaism can occur unless Judaism takes in Jesus as the Messiah, or unless Christianity ejects Him as the Messiah. Judaism sees the union coming by the ejection of the Lord as the Messiah, and rejoices at every sign of it.

Dr. Charles F. Aked, who has since blossomed out as a Jewish spokesman, delivered a sermon in which he cast aside all the “super-natural” elements in the life of Christ, from His birth, to the significance of His death, and was hailed by the Jewish press as “the fulfillment of the prophecy that within fifty years the religion of all the American people, outside the Catholic Church, would be Judaism in principle even though not in name.”

“No Jew,” says the American Israelite, “will conceal his gratification when he finds Christians virtually admitting that liberal Christianity is practically an acceptance of the doctrine of liberal Judaism.”
Unfortunately, this is true.

Liberal Christianity and Liberal Judaism meet, but only by the surrender of all that is distinctively Christian in doctrine. A liberal Christian is more Jewish than Christian.

The statement may sound harsh and arouse resentment, but it is a very simple matter for any liberal Christian to convince himself of this by reading the volume of liberal Jewish doctrine put out by Kaufman Kohler, president of the Hebrew Union College. Liberalism is the funnel by which Christianity is expected to run into Judaism, just as liberalism so-called in other departments of life is expected to bring about certain other Jewish aims.

“Liberalism” in Jewish thought means a wide open country in every way. Judaism has opposed every significant reform that has come to the country; prohibition, Sunday decency, movie and stage regeneration, and community reverence for sacred things. Judaism has been the prop of the liquor traffic, Sunday desecration, movie and stage excesses, and public contempt for the sacred things of the prevailing religion; and it is all too evident that the Jewish propaganda has made serious inroads everywhere.

A Congregational Church in New Jersey decided to abandon the Bible in some of its classes and substitute sociology, politics, municipal government and kindred subjects for study, and the Jewish press hailed it as another sign that the church was “in a fair way to adopt what is in substance American Judaism.” In St. Louis a clergyman, instead of preaching sermons, began to act out moralistic dramas which he himself had written, and the Jewish press again hailed it as a sign of the dissatisfaction of the Christian with his church. Everything done in every branch of the Christian church has been closely watched, and wherever a departure occurred from the distinctly Christian position it was extravagantly applauded; and wherever loyalty to the landmarks appeared, it was just as extravagantly condemned. Judaism does not wish the Christian church to remain Christian. This accounts for destructive Higher Criticism being almost exclusively the work of Jews, although the world has long known them under the guise of “German critics.”

Jewish intolerance today, yesterday and in every age of history where Jews were able to exert influence or power, is indisputable except among people who do not know the record. Jewish intolerance in the past is a matter of history; for the future it is a matter of Jewish prophecy. One of the strongest causes militating against the full Americanization of several millions of Jews in this country is their belief – instilled in them by their religious authorities – that they are “chosen,” that this land is theirs, that the inhabitants are idolators, that the day is coming when the Jews will be supreme. How can they otherwise act than in agreement with such declarations? You can see what is meant if you read Jewish articles describing the shoving aside of the New England people by the Jews; the supercilious attitude adopted toward the stock that made America is merely a fore-shadowing of what would be the complete attitude if power and influence made it possible. Bolshevism, which began with the destruction of the class that contained all the promise of a better Russia, is an exact parallel for the attitude that is adopted in this country regarding the original stock.

We are not permitted by the Jews to sing “The Battle Hymn of the Republic” in our schools because one of the stanzas has a Christian flavor. The Jews claim that the presence of one Jewish child in any assembly of children ought in “fairness” to prevent the singing of that historic song.

Norman Hapgood, writing in a Jewish publication, said: “I need hardly explain that I do not think Jews ought to insist overmuch on their rights or nationality in a negative sense. They ought to be as much Jews as they can, but ought to be as little as possible of what is merely anti-Christian. For the Jews to try to get a song out of the public schools because it praises Jesus is perhaps natural but hardly wise.” Mr. Hapgood received a lot of abuse for his well-conceived counsel.

Again we come to the end of our space with the record hardly scratched. Sufficient has been presented to show the strong, unceasing anti-Christian activity of the Jews in the United States. Had the Jewish press been read extensively by non-Jews during the past 15 years, this present series of articles would have been unnecessary – the people would have known the facts. It is to present some of the facts that are illustrated in the Jewish press along the line of religious intolerance that these two articles have been written.

Thin skins or thick skulls?

Jewish spokesmen plead for suppression of facts in the name of “religious tolerance,” and they denounce exposure of facts as being “religious persecution.” Read the whole non-Jewish and secular publications and you will not find one one-hundred-thousandth part of the animosity against the Jewish religion which is found in the Jewish press – continuously found week after week for long years – against the Christian religion. The present writer has never seen nor heard of an article attacking the Jews’ religion.

So, once for all, in spiking the cry of “religious persecution,” we show that it exists in quantity and strength among the Jews – nowhere else. No one imbued with the American spirit would or could condemn, hinder, or even remonstrate with any person on account of the faith he holds.

As to “religious prejudice” or “persecution” entering into the present series of articles – there they are, reprinted in booklet form for permanent examination: where is the prejudice or persecution? Cite the page!

Jewish spokesmen would use their energy to better advantage, and more to the honor of the Jewish people, if they would address themselves to what is in the articles, rather than to what is not in them. The statements made by The Dearborn Independent have been voluminously discussed; but they are still awaiting an answer.

Egalitarians on a global plantation

Reconstructing history

By William J. Atkinson IV
firstfreedom.net

A wise man once said, “Truth is the first casualty of war.”

The statement has been borne out over and over in the long history of this world’s conflicts since man’s creation.

Another truth no less accurate is that the winner of any war writes the account of it. Perhaps at no other time in history has this statement been proven so well as in the War for Southern Independence, or what some incorrectly call the Civil War. In the last one hundred and thirty-seven years the history of that great conflict and the motives and principles of both sides have been reconstructed and changed almost as much as the South itself has been reconstructed.

Innocence betrayed

Ask the average public school child, “What was the Civil War fought over?” and you will get a wide variety of answers starting with, “It was fought to free the Black race from evil, intolerant, White men in the South who were running their own version of the holocaust using slaves,” or the answer – “Was there a Civil War?”

The fact is that most modern public school children have no concept of American history, the founding fathers or the “Civil War.” The ones that do learn “history” discover the founding fathers were immoral, drunken revolutionaries who didn’t want a foreign king telling them what to do. This reconstructing of history is one of the more important aspects of the socialist agenda, because if true history is given to the people they may recognize that the modern concept of liberty is entirely different from that held by the Founding Fathers. The first target of reconstructionist history has undoubtedly been the War for Southern Independence.

Digging out facts

Any serious historian who wants to find the true reasons behind the War for Southern Independence must search beyond the modern textbooks and historical fiction that permeate our society today and read the histories and opinions of the men involved in that war on both sides. Only then does the truth about the motives of both sections become clear to a student of the War for Southern Independence.

The differences between the North and the South, morally and politically, in the 1850s were very striking. The South was becoming the epitome of constitutional philosophy. Liberty and historical Christianity pervaded the entire society. Strong families with Christian principles about liberty and government produced great statesmen such as John C. Calhoun and John Randolph, who championed the cause of freedom in the country. The North on the other hand was rapidly becoming a hotbed of radical socialists, religious heresies and abolitionist doctrines. The first communist philosopher, Robert Owen, came from the North. He founded the earliest communist experiment at New Harmony, Indiana in 1825, when Karl Marx was only a seven year old schoolboy.

They don’t get it

Other communist settlements started during this time included Brook Farm, located in West Roxbury, Massachusetts, and the Fruitlands, started by communist philosopher Bronson Alcott. All of these ventures, as with every other communist experiment, ended in failure; but the ideas of communism were still taught by many. Various reforms championed by northern philosophers included health food cults, world peace movements, and the feminist movement.

Another institution arising in the North was the public school movement. Horace Mann, considered by many its founder, brought public schooling to the forefront of northern ideals by claiming that “nine tenths of the crimes in the penal code would become obsolete” if children were properly educated. Through the philosophies of Horace Mann, Robert Owen, and many others, the people of the North began to believe that salvation was a result of education, not through the Bible and faith in Christ. The truth behind the purpose of public schools was stated many years later by Orestes Brownson, one of the founders of that movement. He said,

“The great object was to get rid of Christianity, and to convert our churches into halls of science. The plan was not to make open attacks on religion, although we might belabor the clergy and bring them into contempt where we could; but to establish a system of State – we said national – schools, from which all religion was to be excluded, in which nothing was to be taught but such knowledge as is verifiable by the senses, and to which all parents were to be compelled by law to send their children.”

Abolitionism was perhaps the most alarming movement that sprang up in the North in the early nineteenth century. In the South and the North there were many Anti-slavery movements calling for gradual emancipation of slaves so as not to leave their owners in financial straits. Abolitionism, however, rejected this idea totally. It called for the immediate abolition of slavery, and when that did not happen encouraged slaves to revolt against their masters. It was during this time that the Nat Turner rebellion took place, in which several White families, men, women and children, were massacred by the slaves.

But the most damning belief among abolitionists was that of egalitarianism, or, that men are equal in all things. This teaching is rooted in the French Revolution and the Enlightenment period.

Historical Christianity had always held the belief that man was equal before the cross; that is, God was not a respecter of persons in terms of whom he would save, for all should have the right to a fair trial; but it rejected the idea that all men should be equal in terms of possessions, position and education. Christianity understood that God makes all men different, each with particular abilities and distinctions varying from others.

The rituals that fail

The egalitarian philosophy, however, demands public schools because all men must be equal in their level of education and thought; it demands communism, as all must have equal wealth; it demands welfare, because everybody should have a house, provisions and a job. And the only institution that could propagate these reforms, in the minds of egalitarians, was the government. This anti-Christian and anti-biblical philosophy was the belief of most of the leaders of the North during this time, producing a hatred of the South and its belief in liberty rather than universal equality.

During this period of egalitarian thought, radicalism and socialistic reform up there, the South unlike the North had remained loyal to the historical concept of liberty. People in the South had refused to accept the religious heresies of that Transcendentalism and Unitarianism, holding fast to the faith of their fathers. As a result of the Christian faith, they refused to allow governmental intrusion into charity, education and the distribution of wealth. Repeatedly the North attempted to bring up laws in Congress to create a public school system, and each time Southern legislators stopped it. Staunchly refusing to condone the North’s attempts to create a large federal government, as a result the South made its existence a roadblock to that liberal Utopia the North desired to create.

Armchair bloodlust

It was not long before the Northern reformers realized that the only way to reach their socialist goals was to destroy the South. Wendall Phillips, a very prominent abolitionist, said: “I hold that the South is to be annihilated. I mean the intellectual, social, aristocratic South.” Ralph Waldo Emerson, a celebrated transcendentalist and abolitionist, said, “If it takes ten years, and ten to recover the general prosperity, the destruction of South is worth so much.” Thaddeus Stevens, a radical Congressman from Pennsylvania, summed up the thoughts of many in 1861, stating, “If their whole country must be laid waste, and made a desert, in order to save this Union from destruction, so let it be. I would rather, sir, reduce them to a condition where their whole country is to be repopled than perpetrate the destruction of this people through our agency.”

Notice that none of these men, all of them being dedicated abolitionists, cared about setting the slaves free; they were concerned with destroying the South. Thus, in 1860 when a radical administration took office in Washington, the South fearing the end of her liberties was in sight exercised its God-given and constitutional right, seceding from the Union it had voluntarily joined.

Most basic right of any State

In 1775 the greatest manifesto in history was penned by the men of the Continental Congress, the Declaration of Independence. In that document these words were written: “When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one People to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the Powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature’s God entitle them...” Later on, the document maintains that, if a government becomes oppressive, “it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government.” Acting upon this great principle, the right of people to govern themselves, the South seceded from the Union. The biblical teaching, that liberty came from God, was not granted by governments, caused the men of the South to rise up and resist that invasion by the North with great courage, and bravery never equaled in history. In defense of these great truths, men from all walks of life in the South – rich and poor, small and great, White and Black – joined together to fight the invaders. And it was because they were motivated by a desire to pass on the heritage of freedom to their children that they gave their lives on the field of battle.

As the superior industry and population of the North ground down the small but valiant South, boys as young as twelve and thirteen took their fathers’ places in the ranks of the army in a desperate attempt to preserve their right to self-rule. Finally, after four years of war during which atrocities never before heard of were perpetrated against the women and children of the South, the Confederate States of America and the South were destroyed.

Forty percent of the male population was wiped out in the South, along with countless numbers of women and children massacred by Northern armies. In 1866 less than a year after the war ended, the Northern government passed the Merrill Act, setting up public schools in the South. All Southern children were required to attend. This act, along with the fourteenth amendment, completed the conquest of the South, and founded the monolithic federal government which dominates today even the minutest of our activities.

Fiction for schoolchildren

Along with the reconstruction of the South came the reconstruction of history. Northern historians quickly rewrote the War for Southern Independence into the version we all know so well today – that of the evil, racist, backward South trying to perpetually enslave the Black race and destroy the Union in one blow, contrasted with the holy, pious, freedom-loving North saving the Union and freeing the slaves.

Indeed, anyone studying history will see that, far from freeing those slaves, the “Civil War” enslaved the entire country to a subsuming federal government which believes its laws and ordinances are greater than God and his word. It was this event, the destruction of the South, that started the irresistible and inevitable march toward absolute tyranny and the destruction of all biblical rights and freedoms, the fruition of which we are seeing today.

The reconstructing of history by the North has caused our present generation in the South to rise up and curse their fathers who died trying to keep them free. It is this constant changing, falsifying of historical facts, that brings Southerners to remove the banner their fathers fought under, and today embrace the tyranny the old South tried to resist. Thus, the once proud and free nation, wealthiest country on earth and the last bastion of freedom and Christianity – the South – is going the way of our liberties and rights: to the dust of history.

That today’s South and the descendants of those Northerners having invaded to set up an occupational government lack the moral staying power it destroyed shows up in the recent conduct of William Atkinson’s Christianity – gone with the wind. See page 24.

HUMAN RIGHTS WATCH:

Israel violated laws of war, targeting media and civilians

So what else is new?

Israeli army attacks on journalists and media centers in Gaza during last month’s military operation violated the laws of war, Human Rights Watch has said.

Two Palestinian cameramen were killed and at least ten media personnel wounded during the conflict. Four media facilities and four private companies were also damaged, and a two-year-old boy who lived across the street from one of the buildings was killed by the IDF attacks, the organization said.

Par for that unlawful curse

After examining the targeted sites and interviewing witnesses, HRW concluded that there were no signs that any of the journalists and media sites hit were valid targets. The Israeli government has maintained the attacks were against belligerents engaged in combat, claiming two of the cameramen were “ Hamas operatives” and the media buildings were Hamas “operational communications infrastructure.”

The New York-based rights group stated that those injured and killed were not legitimate military targets, as claimed by the Israeli government following the IDF strikes.

However, Israeli officials’ justifications for targeting the media facilities showed a direct intent to hit these sites, and reflected the unlawful nature of such attacks, HRW argued.

“Just because Israel says a journalist was a fighter or a TV station a command center does not make it so,” HRW Middle East director Sarah Leah Whitson said in a statement. “Journalists who praise Hamas and TV stations that applaud attacks on Israel may be propagandists, but that does not make them legitimate targets under the laws of war.”

Under international law, journalists and media workers are considered civilians and are “immune from attack unless they are directly participating in hostilities,” HRW explained.

A radio station would only be a valid target if it were being used directly for combat operations, such as transmitting orders. Messages favoring an organization and its attacks do not qualify as military involvement.

Hamas-run media and its staff are therefore protected under the laws of war, unless they are directly engaged in military operations, which Israel didn’t prove, HRW said.

Just write a check

Deliberate targeting is a violation and the law requires the offending State to investigate, and to adequately compensate the victims.

About 170 Palestinians including 103 civilians, as well as two IDF soldiers and four Israeli civilians, died during the offensive on Gaza from November 14 to 21. Israel launched the conflict with the stated aim of reducing cross-border rocket fire.

Not only psychotic children going bonkers on drugs

Why we are in Afghanistan, where the bankers want to keep us for 12 more years

By Chevaux

vidrebel.wordpress.com

Zbigniew Brzezinski got America involved in Afghanistan by funding Al Qaeda and other organizations to provoke the Russians into invading the country which has been aptly described as the graveyard of empires. He wanted to bankrupt the Soviet Union so his native Poland would be free. He accomplished his goal in 1989. Brzezinski was Jimmy Carter’s National Security Advisor. He is a member of the Bilderberg Society and a founding member of the Trilateral Commission along with Henry Kissinger, David Rockefeller and Sir Evelyn de Rothschild. Between then and now we have killed more than four million people in Afghanistan.

Since the Soviet occupation bankrupted those invaders, why are we spending ten billion dollars a month on an unwinnable war there ourselves? America could free up that money and avoid going over such a fiscal cliff. The banking elite does not care that America goes bankrupt through a war. In fact, bankruptcy requires the U. S. to borrow money at interest which bankers create out of nothing. They see it as their advantage to bankrupt America so that we pay taxes on ever increasing amounts of fictional debt which only transfers wealth from us to them.

The major consideration in America’s war, from the banker’s perspective, is the tremendous profits he makes. Great Britain fought two Opium wars against China in the 19th century. America’s first Opium war was the Vietnam war and its second is the Afghan occupation. The total trade in illegal drugs and weapons is at least one trillion dollars. This is apart from the 500 billion dollars in bribes the banks launder every year according to Asia Times, though 40% of that goes to Chinese politicians. This does not include money those bankers are allowed to steal from the U. S. federal government appropriations.

Donald Rumsfeld announced September 10, 2001, that he could not find 2.3 trillion dollars in Department of Defense spending. Other departments have reported missing money by the billions, as has the European Union, though on a smaller scale. Up to four billion dollars a week is stolen from federal spending. That does not include the money they steal from the sale of Treasury bonds. Dr Jim Willie has reported that over the years America has sold more than 3.5 trillion dollars in bonds than were required to fund our deficits. We can only assume the bankers were allowed to pocket the trillions and then charge us interest on what they stole.

In the Fast and Furious case, America sent guns south and required cocaine in exchange. This has been happening since the Iran Contra affair of the 1980s. Under Obama, court records in Chicago revealed that the CIA was allowing the Sinaloa drug cartel to ship in 5.5 tons of cocaine per flight. Gordon Duff said the U. S. is using the Global Hawk, a drone version of the U2 spy plane, to fly drugs out of Afghanistan. Guns have also been given to favored drug gangs in cities like Miami, Los Angeles, Gary and Chicago.

Not just opium pipelines

Another reason for war in Afghanistan is the pipelines. This war has blocked the construction of proposed pipelines from the Caspian sea through Turkmenistan across Afghanistan to Pakistan, and from there an optional line to take oil further across Pakistan to China. An additional pipeline has been proposed from Iran to link up to this major line from the Caspian sea which does border Iran.

Paper tiger on a high

The U. S. government has shut down American industry and sent 12 million jobs overseas. This is rather silly, as giving away that industrial base means that it can no longer confront large nations. All it can do is rack up millions of deaths in lands where people are unarmed. The other day the U. S. Army defended killing children in Afghanistan using drones because the children had evil intentions.

The decision to invade Afghanistan was made prior to 9/11. About ten days after 9/11 retired four star General Wesley Clark was in the Pentagon when a general told him that they had decided to invade Iraq. Clark asked why, and the general said he did not know why they were going to do that. And then two weeks later, after the bombing of Afghanistan had started, that general gave him a list of seven nations targeted for over the next five years. The list included Iraq, Syria, Lebanon, Somalia, Libya, Sudan and Iran. Please note that they had intended to finish subduing these nations in five years, but they still have not taken on Syria and Iran. And the American aircraft carrier pulled out of that area as soon as the Russian Iskander missiles arrived. They have mach six speed. A single 1,550 pound (704 kilogram) fuel air explosive warhead could take out one aircraft carrier.

Day of reckoning

Also note: the Israelis invaded Lebanon with superior air power and total ground forces; they outnumbered Hezbollah nearly three to one. And yet Israel was soundly defeated. That game plan had been written up in 1982 by Oded Yinon.

The short version was to take out those nations near Israel that would oppose the extermination of the Palestinian people and say no to Israel expanding its borders from the Nile to the Euphrates. That there are more than 300 million people living in those countries is of no concern to the Israelis, who are always willing to fight to the last American. It has cost the U. S. four trillion dollars. How much do you think it may yet cost to exterminate 300 million people? Second Question: What are the odds we’ll start World War III, causing the deaths of a few billion people for Israel?

Sane minds also exist

There is hope. Congressman Walter Jones has started an online petition that demands the U. S. pull put of Afghanistan in 2013. The U. S. government wants to stay there until 2024. There is no justification for this organized slaughter. It is not a war between two warring parties.

Media continue European “anti-Semitic” crime wave hoax

The answer to most problems – according to the logic of left-wing media munchkins – is another try at what caused them to begin with.

topconservativenews.com

All across Europe, Muslim immigrants are attacking Jewish people. Often they believe they are retaliating against Israel.

The media aggressively censor the true nature of these crimes. The ethnicity of the perpetrators is censored and the crimes are called “Anti-Semitic.” Most of the Muslim perpetrators are Semitic themselves.

Why don’t the media call them “Semite on Semite attacks”?

The overwhelming majority of these crimes are committed by Muslims. Yet the media would have you believe that native European Christians are committing the crimes. These hoax articles in the media are slander against the native populations of these countries.

Muslim immigrants rioting in Swedish. The media called this a “Swedish riot.” Radical left-wing extremist Barbara Specter says the answer to Muslim on Jew crime in Sweden is to bring in a lot more Muslims.

Here we see that even the Israeli media are pushing this hoax.

Chanel 7 Israel gave a long list of “no go” areas for Jews in France, Britain, Norway, Denmark and Germany. It talks about numerous crimes committed against Jews by Muslim immigrants. Instead of identifying the perpetrators, it calls those attacks “anti-Semitic” and makes references to the Third Reich. The media outlet purposely leads the reader to the false conclusion that native French, British, Norwegian, Danish, and German Christians are committing the attacks.

Here we see one of the most bizarre left-wing activists in all of Europe. Barbara Specter is an American Jewish woman who moved to Sweden. She says that Jews are at the forefront of promoting open borders in Europe. She admits that these open borders lead to immigrant populations who attack Jews. She also acknowledges that the people who are ruining Europe with open border policies will be resented, and Jews will thus be at the top of the list of people to resent. Yet she claims that the solution is for Jews to promote open borders with even more zeal!

First Amendment? What First Amendment?

By Jeff Davis
whitecivilrights.com

The Huffington Post has a column by Marian Wright Edelman which gives us a glimpse of The Agenda. Like most far left liberals, they want to outlaw the First Amendment.

The article notes, “The growth in hate groups and the use of their divisive and negative language in the mainstream political and media arena is cause for national alarm. Already this year several horrendous hate crimes, possible hate crimes, and crimes committed by people with ties to hate groups have received national attention.”

So the exercise of a Right guaranteed by the United States Constitution by people who want to turn the U. S. back into a pro-White form of government should be banned because of a tiny number of crimes, which have been appropriately punished as crimes.

But what about...?

Notice that Ms. Edelman at no time addresses the issue of Black-on-White crimes, those new flash mob crimes, which often involve Black youths assaulting White people at random.

I’m sure in Ms. Edelman’s confused mind, the George Zimmerman shooting of Trayvon Martin somehow counts as a White-on-Black hate crime even though Zimmerman is half Latino and all the circumstances of that incident suggest that Trayvon violently attacked Zimmerman unprovoked. Or, should everyone consider a Neighborhood Watchman who keeps his eyes on a probable burglar “a provocation”? The information from Trayvon’s Twitter account suggests that he was taking a drug called “Lean,” that can cause violent psychotic behavior.

Marian Wright Edelman

“Love” assaults?

Needless to say, she makes no mention at all of the dozens of “Trayvon revenge” attacks against innocent White people by rabid gangs of Blacks. No mention of the Baltimore tourist who was beaten half to death and stripped naked by a pack of feral “urban yoots” while the whole revolting business was recorded on a cell phone for upload to YouTube.

The article continues: “For forty years, the Southern Poverty Law Center’s mission

“On a darker side, literally, we had some poor White college boy shot dead last night by four Blacks. The 20-year-old was getting out of class. They stole a sandwich, a cell phone and two five dollar bills from him and shot him in the head. As you know, you will not hear about this one in the news...”

Dec. 21, 2012 – Media refuse to call this a “hate crime.” Instead call it a “robbery,” even though the thugs only took $10, a cell phone and a sandwich! If the races had Hush crime.

As a clearer picture began to form around last week’s fatal shooting of a 19-year-old community college student in downtown Wilmington, two of the alleged perpetrators admitted to playing a role in the crime, but pointed to another as the trigger-man.

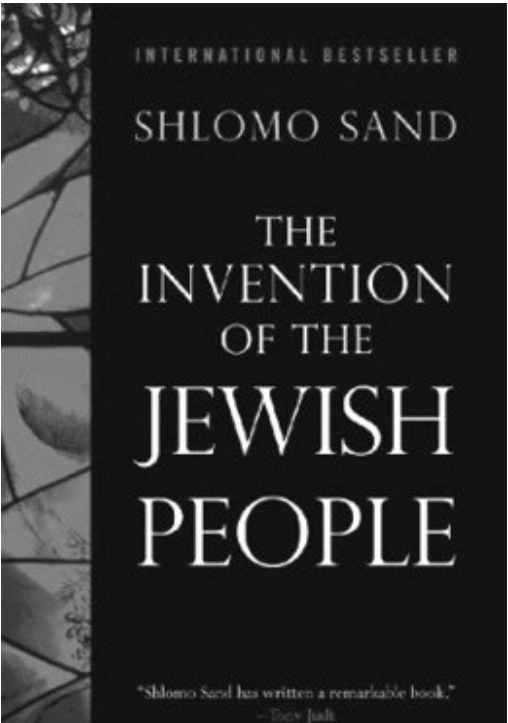

In interviews at the New Hanover County jail Monday, Christopher D. Cromartie Jr., 23, and Daniel E. Henry, 17, reiterated what District Attorney Ben David said in court Monday. They said Quintel R. Grady, also known as “Ghost,” killed Joshua Proutey, the teenager who had just clocked out of work Thursday night at the Hannah Block Community Arts Center when he was robbed and killed in a gravel parking lot. A fourth suspect, Jasmine N. Dottin, allegedly waited in a getaway car nearby.

“COUNTERING OFFICIAL Zionist historiography, Sand questions whether the Jewish People ever existed as a national group with a common origin in the Land of Israel/Palestine. He concludes that the Jews should be seen as a religious community comprising a mishmash of individuals and groups that had converted to the ancient monotheistic religion but do not have any historical right to establish an independent Jewish State in the Holy Land. In short, the Jewish People, according to Sand, are not really a “people” in the sense of having a common ethnic origin and national heritage. They certainly do not have a political claim over the territory that today constitutes Israel and the occupied Palestinian territories, including Jerusalem.” – Leon T. Hadar

Confronted by angry parents, Giles, according to the media, claimed that he was within his rights to structure observances as he saw fit, regardless of the law. He further defended his choosing of the song – obviously the primary point of controversy – by saying it exemplifies “the idea that everybody is somebody at Capital.”

We won’t stand for it!

By Gregory Kay
gregmkay@yahoo.com

Those having followed my articles in The First Freedom and elsewhere for any length of time know I’m no fan of the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag of the occupational government in Washington, DC, and I’m certainly not defending it here; instead, this is about a violation of the law. You see, in West Virginia, the law says that the Pledge of Allegiance is to be held at every school. It is also the law, both State and federal, that no one can be forced to stand for it – whether from religious, political, moral or simply personal convictions. It’s the same with the National Anthem, written by my cousin, Francis; no one can legally force you to honor it by getting to your feet...unless you’re Black and think you’re above the law, as happened here in the Mountain State.

And, as you’ll most likely be interested in knowing, the anthem in question wasn’t The Star Spangled Banner.

Going his mile

At Charleston’s Capital High School, according to local papers and TV, it was discovered that Negro Principal Clinton Giles had been requiring all students to stand and recite not only the Pledge of Allegiance and the U. S. National Anthem, but also a different “national anthem”: the song “Lift Every Voice and sing,” widely referred to as “the African-American National Anthem.”

There; I thought that might get your attention.

Despite threats and pressure, not every student complied, but for those who didn’t, there were consequences.

So the parents took it over that principal’s shaved black head, and laid it out before Kanawha County Schools Superintendent Ron Duerring. Mr. Duerring responded by pointing out the obvious: “There is court case at the national level, supreme court level, federal and State that says you can’t force any child to stand for any pledge of any kind.” That sounds pretty cut and dried to me.

Childish tantrum

Miffed at having his ego slapped down by the facts, Giles reportedly canceled everything, including the Pledge, the real National Anthem and the fake one.

Then, following a “conversation” with Superintendent Duerring, who, once again, had to explain the law – “The law requires us to do the pledge so we have to follow through with what the law requires” – Giles backed down, and agreed to reinstate the required material and, according to at least one article, said a different song from the Negro National Anthem would be played instead of it. Further, nobody would be forced to stand for any of it.

We’ll see how that goes. Meanwhile, however, we’re seeing yet another example of the very same sort of TNG (Typical “Negro” Government) that typifies nearly every situation in which one of them is put in charge of anything, from Obama in the once-White House down through various Negro-run cities like Detroit and Atlanta, to these little dictators at local schools. All that seems to matter for them is their own desires, any opposition to which, of course, is “racist,” neither logic and certainly not the law applying.

All socio-political and racial issues aside, is this the example you want set for your children: a worldview based on nothing but emotion and “me-me-me” selfishness? Do you really want your children reduced to the level of the lowest common denominator?

And people wonder why so many of us support segregation!

U. S. Rep. Barletta to Homeland Security panel

We lionized him as the tough-on-illegals mayor of Hazleton. Will he now stay on top of what got him elected to Congress?

standardspeaker.com
A Pennsylvania Congressman known for his hard-line stance on illegal immigration is now going to have a voice as a member of Homeland Security. U. S. Rep. Lou Barletta, R-Hazleton, was appointed to the U. S. House committee responsible for border security, protecting the country from terrorist attacks, responding to disasters and protecting national infrastructure in the 113th Congress.

Congressman Barletta will become a member of the Committee on Homeland Security after he is sworn in January 3. “Fixing our broken immigration system without securing our borders is like replacing the carpet while the roof is leaking. I’ve been saying for years that we need to secure our borders, improve how we keep track of those visiting our country legally, crack down on fraudulent documentation and deport criminal aliens. Joining the Homeland Security committee, I will be a loud voice to fix our broken system,” Barletta said. “I’ve been battling the problems caused by illegal immigration for six and a half years so I will bring a unique perspective to the Homeland Security committee. I look forward to tackling these very serious problems and introducing legislation that strengthens our national security.”

Back in July, Barletta called for hearings on immigration policy and as the one-time former mayor of Hazleton, in 2006, he tried to introduce a controversial Illegal Immigration Relief Act, which would have penalized businesses that knowingly hired illegal immigrants and landlords who knowingly rented to illegal immigrants. The city was sued and a judge heard the appeal in the case in August. At a press conference earlier last year, Barletta criticized President Barack Obama’s administration and Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano for improperly using “prosecutorial discretion” for granting indefinitely renewable two-year work permits to illegal immigrants. The action, according to Barletta, granted “de facto amnesty” to as many as 1.4 million illegal immigrants. The action also prompted Barletta to ask leaders of the House Homeland Security and Judiciary committees to hold investigative hearings on the Obama administration’s ability to use prosecutorial discretion when deciding not to deport illegal immigrants. Proponents of the administration’s directive contended it would give undocumented immigrants the ability to work and live without fear of being deported.

The Committee on Homeland Security was established in 2002 to provide congressional oversight for the U. S. Department of Homeland Security and better protect the American People against a possible attack. The committee has jurisdiction over Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), Customs Border Protection (CBP), Citizenship and Immigration Services (CIS) and the U. S. Coast Guard; border security programs including efforts to achieve operational control of the border; and border smuggling and trafficking of drug, human, currency, weapon and other illicit materials. HSI dismantles Phoenix drop house; Mexicans charged

yumanewsnow.com
Phoenix, Arizona – Three Mexican men face federal charges following their arrest on December 7 at a West Valley drop house discovered by U. S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement’s (ICE) Homeland Security Investigations (HSI). Francisco Javier Astorga-Velarde, 22, Jose Pedro Soto-Valdez, 32, and Noel Galdinez-Marmolejo, 32, appeared in federal court on December 10, where they were charged in a federal complaint with conspiring to harbor illegal aliens. HSI special agents were first alerted to the drop house December 5 after a woman contacted HSI Atlanta to report that a man was demanding she pay him $4,000 or he would kill her niece, who was allegedly being held hostage in a drop house in Phoenix. HSI Atlanta alerted HSI Phoenix special agents, who worked around the clock to develop information on the possible location of the drop house. By Friday morning, special agents had sufficient reason to believe the woman was being held in a residence on West Highland Avenue. When special agents and officers from the Phoenix Police Department responded to the house, they observed the defendants fleeing out the back door. The defendants ran back inside after seeing police. Special agents approached the back door and called to the occupants of the house to come outside. The defendants complied and were taken into custody. Fearing for the safety of the people inside, special agents entered the home and discovered 14 smuggled aliens, including the niece of the woman who alerted authorities. Special agents subsequently obtained a federal search warrant for the residence and discovered two 9 mm handguns inside. According to the criminal complaint, Astorga-Velarde served as the “boss” of the house. He allegedly hit two male victims in the face with a gun and called the wife of one of the men, threatening to kill her husband if she did not pay his smuggling fee. Astorga-Velarde is also accused of threatening a female alien with sexual assault and claiming he would cut her into pieces and throw her in the trash. The complaint alleges Galdinez-Marmolejo used a gun to hit one of the male victims on the head, face, hands and feet. Soto-Valdez allegedly beat the male victim with the guns and threatened to sexually assault, cut, kill or sell the female aliens in the house if their smuggling fees were not paid. The investigation is ongoing and the defendants may face additional charges. The case is being prosecuted by Lisa Jennis Settler of the U. S. Attorney’s Office, District of Arizona. A criminal complaint is simply the method by which a person is charged with criminal activity and raises no inference of guilt. An individual is presumed innocent until competent evidence is presented to a jury that establishes guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Since January, HSI has encountered 35 drop houses containing 436 illegal aliens in the metropolitan Phoenix area.

Six mass shootings in U. S. since U. N. gun control push

whitecivilrights.com
Yet another mass shooting has taken place in the U. S. ending in the deaths of 26 people in Connecticut. The shooter has been described as autistic with a personality disorder (although a mass shooting by an autistic person doesn’t seem to have ever happened before). As the U. S. is increasingly invaded by Third World people, the medical resources will be spread more and more thinly, which includes treatment for mental health issues. This means that people with serious mental problems will go untreated, and catastrophic results can take place. Some folks may point to increasingly violent movies and video games put out by the Zionist-controlled entertainment media. Movies up through the 1950s were certainly much less bloodthirsty than they are today, and there was nowhere near the problem with mass shootings then compared to now.

What happened?
Still, it seems strange that mass shootings were so rare in previous decades compared to recent decades. An anti-malarial drug, Lariam, that was given to U. S. soldiers in Afghanistan, appeared to be causing some soldiers to go berserk upon returning home and to murder their families. This raises the question: Would the U. S. government start putting drugs like Lariam into the water supply for small towns, knowing that certain mentally fragile individuals might snap and go off on a shooting spree? According to one source, Wayne LaPierre, Executive Vice President of the National Rifle Association, said “President Bill Clinton tolerated a certain amount of violence and killing to strengthen the case for gun control and to score points for his party...” The Democrats have repeatedly released dangerous criminals back into the general population, knowing that they would commit serious crimes, including crimes with guns. One recently released felon in California, an Oriental named Ka Pasasouk, murdered four people in Northridge, California. Sinister If corrupt politicians would knowingly release dangerous criminals with the certainty that they would kill some of us innocent civilians, does it seem all that unreasonable that these same politicians might add chemicals to the water to cause mass shootings around the country to support their gun control agenda? There have been six mass shootings in the U. S. since July when a U. N. gun control treaty that Barack Obama supported was first introduced. This treaty would ban semi-auto firearms. Just days after that treaty was introduced, the Aurora, Colorado, theater shooting took place with 12 dead and 58 wounded. Then there was a shooting at a Sikh temple in Wisconsin, leaving six dead and four wounded, then a shooting at the Texas A&M campus left three dead. That was followed by a shooting of four police in Louisiana which left two police dead. Then a shooting at the Clackamas Town Hall mall left three dead and one wounded, and, most recently, a shooting spree in Connecticut has left 26 dead. Two of those mass shootings might have sinister origins not connected to gun control advocates. One news source notes “One interesting connection to the tragedy that took place at the Sandy Hook school is that the father of Adam Lanza has a connection to the theater shootings that took place in Aurora earlier this year by James Holmes. Both fathers of the shooters were allegedly expected to testify in the Libor scandal that rocked the banking world in June.” The Libor scandal pertains to the largest banking scandal in world history, involving possibly hundreds of billions of dollars. With that kind of money involved, some of the people being investigated may have access to CIA and KGB mind control drugs and techniques. If they can brainwash the children of key witnesses to go off on shooting sprees, that would be one rather impressive way of intimidating a witness. People with that kind of power could potentially murder your whole family if they wanted to. At the very least we should point out that if more Americans were exercising their right to bear arms, such as the teachers at that Connecticut school, one of those armed citizens could have shot back and saved the lives of those children. Mass shootings invariably take place in a “gun free zone” such as in a school, mall or city where the law-abiding people have been disarmed and the criminal psychopath has all the advantages. Remember: When seconds count, the police are minutes away.

Jew media drugging, disarming and destroying our race

By Incog Man
incogman.net

Have you noticed just how thick the mainstream media have been laying down the emotional angle to the Sandy Hook Elementary school massacre? All the sad, funeral background music, those creative montages of grieving citizenry and little kid victim photos slowly zooming in and out? These people have long been expert at manipulating the good graces of us White people and telling us we must be so sensitive, caring and “progressive.” In the end, it’s really just progressing towards our own race’s destruction – no doubt anymore.

Hey, we know something very, very bad is going on here. But is it only deranged psychos due to our increasingly sick, violent media? Or could it even be secret black ops executing the crimes and pinning it on convenient patsies? Maybe they’re merely lining their pockets pushing psychotropic drugs like Ritalin for hyper kiddies, or anti-depressants like Prozac? These highly profitable new drugs apparently have dangerous side effects, making some kill themselves, even snap and go off murdering complete strangers or family in spasms of homicidal violence.

Drug records for school spree killers like Columbine’s nihilistic Jew duo, Klebold and Harris, or Virginia Tech’s South Korean monster boy, Seung-Hui Cho are often kept from the public, supposedly over privacy concerns, but word has leaked that those kids (and others) were indeed drugged time bombs. And it seems quite probable that Adam Lanza, too, was doped up big time before he went bonkers.

Pay careful attention and you’ll notice how hardly a word is breathed about these dangerous drugs now doled out to youth and adults. This is so disgusting, once you see all the Big Pharma commercials they run “during the break.” These hypocrites are quite obviously working towards the removal of our constitutional right to bear arms, over any real concern for the citizens of this country – crocodile tears or not.

Just STOP and think it all out! Look, plenty of stuff has happened in the past that we know has been suppressed from the masses. And we know they’ve specifically targeted the youth with PC brainwashing of all sorts (just turn on the TV right now and you’ll see it). They want to indoctrinate the children as young as possible; making PC virtually instinctual and requiring less reinforcement down the road.

We’ve already witnessed the success of this programming on our young because they now embrace all sorts of insidious social change – including our race’s future status as a minority in our own lands. The Jews media now even have the nerve to openly act like it’s all a good thing.

Just what are these demonic globalist forces doing to us?

They are quite obviously targeting the White race. You think all this is merely “conspiracy” theory? Just stand back and tally up all the different things they are doing:

- Immigration of non-White third worlders.
- Brainwashing the youth with multi-culturalism.
- Keeping us shut up with peecee intimidation.
- Giving away our jobs to “people of color.”
- Making tens of millions dependent on the government.
- Making interracial sex fashionable – mating ourselves away.
- Demonizing the White race in the media.
- Promoting “White guilt.”
- Censoring non-White criminal behavior.
- Censoring what happens to Whites in other countries.
- Censoring White people from speaking out.
- Using holocaust propaganda constantly.
- Jacking us up about the Muslims every minute.
- Stealing our money.
- Destroying Christianity.
- Destroying our political demographics.
- Destroying our morality and institutions.
- Destroying our sanity.

All you got to do is think about all this and add it up in your head. Once you finally figure out the depths of their little games and evils upon us, you’ll be ready to do something about it!

Dump Israel

Actually, the program against the White race has been going on for the last fifty years, at least. They’ve been running this “agenda” to turn our countries into new Brazils and have carefully tailored the plan to keep us from seeing the big picture and revolting en mass. The end result will be a Jewish Commie Police State and the White race a spat-upon minority!

Now these diabolical people want to disarm us. They’ve already succeeded in Britain, South Africa, Ireland, Australia and most of Europe. Today it’s America’s turn to get disarmed.

Make note of the U. N. Gun Control treaty; they want to use that as another excuse to disarm the White race. These insane hypocrites never cared one bit about people and children in the third world getting killed. What do you think they’ve been making our military do for precious Israel over the last decade?

Folks: This is the Zionist “New World Order.” Many see what’s going on, but they still suffer from the peecee brainwashing of those really behind it. That’s why you have all the stuff on Illuminati, Jesuits, Freemasons, Black Popes and even things like UFOs. You can believe in absolutely anything out there but the real perpetrators, or else people will scream “racism,” “anti-Semite” and “Nazi!”

Our founding forefathers knew about evil, corrupt, power-mad people in the world. That’s why they specifically put into the Constitution various important clauses that would protect us from such ones taking over, the Second Amendment for example: the right to bear arms.

Now, you might personally know a nice Black guy, or have a faggoty friend. That’s not the point here. No one says you have to be a big “hater” and all that jazz. I’ve had Black and gay friends or acquaintances. None of them were scared of me going off half-cocked (as in smacking them around, not anything homo).

The gun-grabbing Jews

The trouble-making Jews would love to disarm White America, just as long as they get to keep guns – being the always so innocent and victimized Jews, of course. These *Israel-First*er Zionists understand fully what they are doing to us, and greatly fear White America will one day come after such traitors – as we all should.

So, Incog Man, why do we need to have “assault weapons” like the AR-15 and high-capacity magazines? For hunting deer? Please.

A history lesson

Well, brainiac boy, we need something to fight back against the Jew takeover of our USA. They did it to Christian Russia back in 1917, killing tens of millions of Gentiles by starvation, a favorite genocide tactic of the devious Jews, and secret Police State forces like the NKVD and CHEKA. They would send you to rot and freeze in the Gulag, or maybe shoot you in the back of the head in a bloody dungeon abattoir, while turning your daughter and wife into whores servicing murderous Red Army thugs and Mongolian conscripts.

Why don’t you ever see anything about all this in the media? Because they want to keep it from common knowledge among all the idiot “Kwans” out there.

Sure, military technology trumps small arms. At least if it’s not too many of us. That’s the thing. Once they disarm enough, they can do even more stuff like real serious censorship, increasing propaganda and late night arrests of those who speak out.

Eventually, what’s left will finally get it and, to have any chance at all, we’ll need to go on the offensive against them.

Look at what the local Marxist Jews and International Jewry (including the media you watch now) did to South Africa. White people there are now under constant, brutal attack from Black criminals. They break into White homes and farmsteads, raping the women, beating, stabbing, burning, hanging, strangling and shooting to death entire families in front of each other.

And the same thing is now happening to America. You just don’t hear how bad Black on White crime is in the mainstream media because they want you stupid. The real face of “multiculturalism” is not pretty.

South African woman gang raped and brutally murdered in her own home. You think the police are going to protect you?

KENTUCKY BLOODLETTING carries you on a tour of the killing fields across that State to where innocent Confederate POWs were simply hauled from their cells and marched before Yankee firing squads, four “rebels” murdered in cold blood for each invader killed by the angry citizenry. WHAT ELECTION?

We are delighted with your paper. I hope some of those I sent mini-subscriptions to decided to subscribe. The inability to think critically was certainly evident with the election but it was truly heads you lose, tails you lose – the Stalinist type elections by our Zionist controllers.

ASK FOR LEUCHTER REPORT

Ingrid Rimland states in her interview [TFF Dec. 2012] that she accepts none but quality people into her library. That is not how you bring revisionism to the public. If Ernst Zündel had accepted only “quality” people in his fight there would have been no Leuchter Report. Let us donate as many revisionist books to libraries as we can and, since librarians pride themselves in having on hand the ones that are requested, exhort every revisionist to call for those books. Being on a library shelf legitimizes a book but it has to be called for, checked out, else some whiner gets it removed.

Ingrid writes: “I hoard Ernst Zündel’s paintings as much as King Midas hoarded his gold. He did no such thing! King Midas wished from Dionysus that everything he touched would turn into gold until almost starved to death. As man does not live by gold, he begged the god to undo his foolish wish which had become a curse.

FACE THE REALITY

Am I anti-Semitic? Well, if that means exposing the truth about Jews and their toadies (including Christian Zionists), all of whom diligently strive 24/365 to dismantle the constitutional republic I love – yes, I am. I have zero respect for anyone who sucks up to Jews, whether out of political correctness or sheer cowardice.

Who is waging the intensifying war on Christmas? It isn’t Muslims, and certainly not Christians! Do a little investigative research (www.thezog.wordpress.com) and you’ll discover it is the ACLU, SPLC and ADL, among other powerful Jewish lobbies. Incidentally, non-believing Jewish retailers profit most handsomely from their commercialization of Christmas, while their nutty customers pummel and trample each other the moment those avaricious Jewish shop-owners throw open their doors at the first stroke of Black Friday.

Jews comprise 2% of the population. Yet the majority allows that Christian-hating minority to push and shove to its heart’s content with impunity. If we cannot muster the courage to confront that 2% minority head on, we richly deserve to swallow all the crap it relentlessly shoves down our goyim throats.

Gregory Kay did a great job reminding our people of the Anne Pressly case [TFF Dec. 2012]. The torture slaying of this beautiful young Southern White woman should be enough to convince our people that an evil and primitive race has declared war on us. The Old Testament refers to Blacks as beasts of the field in the books of Leviticus, Deuteronomy and Job. Scripture also says we are to put all evil from among us. That means applying the death penalty, which should be done in public by hanging and/or stoning. You may publish my full address, as I like hearing from our people, especially Greg Kay of West Virginia, one of the States I have in mind for retirement. Why not? It’s over 92% White!

MONTGOMERY MONKEYSHINES

Mr. Childress, Dec. 23
I have tried to get an update, without success, from Ms. Oliver on how your case is proceeding. She has failed to respond to my attempts to contact her by telephone and by email. Her failure to communicate with me in a timely matter has raised no small concern with me. Also, the lawyer representing the City of Montgomery sent a letter complaining about the paperwork Ms. Oliver sent not being completed correctly. I will take a more active role in your case in the future, because Ms. Oliver seems to have encountered some kind of problem or problems.

I plan on calling the attorney for the City of Montgomery on Wednesday and discuss when we can get the depositions scheduled and completed so that both sides can get ready for trial. To get to trial, I feel sure that we will first have to defeat the City’s attempt to have the case dismissed on what the court refers to as summary judgment. As I told you from the beginning, the only defense the arresting officers have to offer in support of their upcoming motion for summary judgment is that you refused to leave the parade area after being so asked by the holder of the parade permit.

In short, does a parade permit trump your constitutional rights? If the court finds that it does, your case is over. If not, we go to trial.

CALL TO ACTION

Articles in The First Freedom are eye-opening and honest. The society in which we live astonishes me. It pains me greatly to watch multiculturalism and integration tear our country apart. For a long time, I felt helpless and believed nobody cared anymore. Then a friend handed me a copy of this newspaper. I read it and quickly realized I’m not alone. I am not a “racist” because loving my race, but a proud White man concerned with the future of our glorious bloodline. And it does not make me a “racist” because helping in any way I can to expose the Jewish agenda. It seems as though some people in the American public have lost contact with the European roots which founded this wonderful land. We Whites must resist alien beliefs not our own. Do your duty to our people: subscribe to The First Freedom. The enemy would settle for nothing short of our destruction.

Terrorize – 1. To terrify. 2. To coerce by intimidation or fear.

The political use of terrorism has to come from a base of power. The worst and most pervasive kind by far is that economic terrorism that the Rothschilds do with their World Bank, IMF and Federal Reserve. In 2012 they fabricated out of thin air three billion dollars to own the two presidential candidates and control the government of this bankrupted corporation, the USA!

When money has no true value it costs the World Bank nothing to use its power of the purse to control everything and all of us! Thus have they become the biggest and truest definition of a terrorist! The more power, control and intimidation, the more terrorism inflicted!

The World Bank Rothschilds use that economic terrorism – sanctions, embargos and no-fly zones – as weapons against the sovereign countries they want to take over and control the banking systems of: Libya, Iraq, Egypt, Afghanistan, etc. (Still free of total Rothchild control are Iran, Lebanon, Syria, Venezuela, Argentina, Iceland and North Korea.)

All the so-called democracies are bought up by the Rothschilds and their power of the purse. Freedom in these democracies is only for the bankers and their organized criminal gang, the IRS, CIA, FBI, TSA and BAR members. As long as these keep doing the Rothschilds’ bidding, the whole system dances to whatever tune the World Bank plays! Unless you have intelligence, morals or a conscience, things are A-OK!

TERROBAMA

I read James Buchanan’s article on voter ID laws [TFF Dec. 2012] and it made me laugh, as, “Is a glass half full or is it half empty?” I feel the Republicans enacted those laws so as to stop as many people from voting as possible. The Pennsylvania State Supreme Court judge says theirs kept him from voting. The State legislature said “This will give Pennsylvania to Romney.” Is James happy or mad? Romney’s family owned the factory that made those voting machines, so, bet they were made to find they gave Romney votes to Obama!

COL. M. O. McNINCH

The Romneys may make those voting machines but “Doc” Rentsch has it right regarding the Rothschilds owning both mules in that racism.

Ours not to create but further develop what’s worthwhile

By Olaf Childress
editor@firstfreedom.net

Sometimes gentlefolk such as you and I must fight, even though it isn’t our first nature. More disposed to suffer evils while they’re bearable than denounce the forms we’re familiar with, this attitude of “just getting along” lately brings excesses that we shouldn’t endure.

When a long train of federal abuses and usurpations aimed at the same invariable object evinces a design to reduce us under absolute despotism, it is our right and duty to throw off such government. Let’s mince no words here.

We’re not declaring independence from the republican principles of our noble sires, but absolving ourselves from an imperial crown now worn by a Jewish mediacracy having usurped those powers delegated by sovereign States united in accord. Nor do we say the U. S. Constitutional Convention placed too few curbs against the vagaries of villains into that sacred compact, since never in a thousand years could humans write evil out of existence. It’s as Thomas Jefferson cautioned us: the price of liberty is eternal vigilance.

Liberty! But there’s the rub. Neglecting one’s duty to protect his honor leads no less to slavery than misusing that same leisure and autonomy secured under constitutional law. Grabbing whatever dazzles but isn’t ours when unguarded and dangled before us by the mediacracy’s “If it feels good do it” program, or heeding their “Don’t knock it till you’ve tried it” come-on, follows the pied piper from liberty’s self-discipline to libertine abandonment.

Doing war by deception

Shall we examine that detour? Orwell’s animal farm guarantees universal equality, except that a few remain necessarily More Equal than others in order for the kolkhoz to meet its five-year quota. Democracy is where every creature votes and whoever owns the media decides what they’ll vote for. Let’s face it; no government is perfect and this one’s teetering on its last hams, as the More Equals post bulletins about herds of grunting terrorists rooting up concrete airport floors across the land. “Just getting along” instead of outing whatever “news” they’re faking at present conscripts us in as active participants.

You think I’m exaggerating? Have the media not indeed dumbed (intimidated) us down below that vigilance Jefferson calls for? Don’t our knees jerk at the slightest suggestion those munchkins may label us “vigilantes”? Why deny we’re voting this empire’s Forever claim each time we mail its stamp otherwise than in distress mode, or wave Old Glory with a purple passion? They’ve got folks cooing Yankee Doodle, bumper-sticking Proud to be an American Bombing Infidels Back to the Stone Age, criticizing “racists,” coddling “gays” and cutting capers on cue.

It’s so much easier playing dumb, going along to get along, yet privately “under the radar” confiding all is not well, hoping and praying somebody will come to the rescue. Ultimately everyone instinctively petitions God – especially that “atheist” demanding all the answers right now. Well, there’s his problem; and, yet again, face it, all of us pull our pants on one leg at a time, waxing brilliant only when confessing the vastness of human ignorance.

Let’s get off this bus headed nowhere, openly discuss the plain but “forbidden” truth of conspirators hypnotizing people to see only theorists across the land instead of a conspiracy, and stand those warmongers before a Nuremberg-style trial. Hopefully such revelations will awaken the masses to pray for guidance in solving our temporal problem, even if it brings simply an ad hoc remedy. Or do we demand a final solution and exile those evildoers?

Impossible? Hitler tried that at a time not unlike our own. With the mediacracy even back then concealing U. S. President Roosevelt’s perfidy, Germany’s desperate attempt at getting the truth past those Jews Of All The World United In Action and preventing a second world war failed, Vice even plant/animal interdependencies often proving decisive to the reproductive orbits of certain species pollinating by whatever means. Pestilence, storm and war portend not only death but renewed vigor, a “baby boom” sometimes benefiting the surviving stock.

Our just deserts

Yes, this necessary evil that would-be mothers sigh about, even out of wedlock, is but a lesser good. No atom of matter stands before anyone’s course unsolicited. Some mind directs every tendency to its fate and purpose, however guided or motivated.

We members of the local March Against Crime knew writer William Atkinson IV personally when he submitted this month’s article on page 18 to The First Freedom back in April 2002. Many considered him a brilliant seventeen-year-old destined to go places. But, on Sunday, December 2, 2012, the Mobile Register’s front page headlined “Sordid case, broken family,” stating: “The events that unfolded Friday in federal court in Mobile involved a case that stretched from Alabama to Honduras, where the

up with and others we’ll counter or keep at a distance when studying how this strategy empowers our enemies.

Carolyn Yeager takes it to them all the time, her radio program carolynyeager.net challenging their great holohoax survivor Elie Wiesel to “show the tattoo” he claims is on his left forearm. The Associated Press did not dare defend its spokesperson when Kamaradin Yeager shot down AP reporter Verena Dobnik’s claim to have seen it.

The First Freedom likewise demands that the Washington Times, Seattle Times, Huffington Post, Salon.com, Bend Bulletin (Oregon), Sun Chronicle, Flagstaff Today, Deseret News, Yahoo news, The Times of Israel and other specifically Jewish news media come clean and retract that blooper they all let out on October 8, 2012.

Hey, AP! Where’s the tattoo?

Change? Thanks, good idea

Let that dude fronting for our enemies when reading his cue cards at a presstitute conference in the Whore House concern us little; the mediacracy/federal government combine will collapse as one. Our alternate media are simply ignoring the District of Corruption’s directives to obey, fear, hate and count cadence.

Hand in our weapons? You Ashkenazis gotta be kidding! Get yourselves back to Moscow; convicted “oil oligarch” Mikhail Khodorkovsky could use a little Chosenite company, since Mr. Putin has a few extra cells available to other conspirators having sucked Russia’s veins dry for seventy-five years. Hey, Associated Press, require more details? We alternates work cheap.

A careful reading on and between the lines of history finds there’s nothing new under the sun. No mortal fathoms the Mind behind it all, merely that our comparative nothingness might kneel for guidance at the beginning of each day’s adventure into this best of possible worlds. The obstacles facing us become impediments only where we acknowledge them as such; otherwise they’re opportunities beckoning a relative immaturity toward its potential.

This holds true in every instance. We’ve but to reflect on past encounters with those vicissitudes that’ve made us what we are: childhood lessons, resolutions carried out and dreams fallen apart at the seams. What profits the loss of a loved one? Think! We become richer when recollecting the years spent together, or poorer for withdrawing into a self-pity that fails to further cultivate and keep alive that person’s contributions.

Self-pity isn’t the same as introspection; it’s blaming our shortcomings on outsiders instead of realizing how much greater the possibilities for humble integrity than what yet remains to one having retired, thinking he’s reached his potential, where none may arrive. Having more liberty than we might well employ is the biggest challenge of all. Nobody should proselytize, compete with or instruct others than his peers, class, race and kind, so let’s work the home front until our ultimate hour. One relates best to those nearest at hand and only stirs up confusion, envy and hate among others who’ve never shared the White man’s burden nor walked a mile in his shoes.

We must stop this Jewish mediacracy’s luring illegal aliens here and teaching them that we English speakers stole their land. The problem isn’t just Mexicans who don’t understand those Aztecs knew not a word of Spanish until Cortez came, missionaries sparsely settling the Southwest but doing nothing toward nation building. Even our own people fall for such “history.” Having conquered Mexico, the U. S. returned that backward State to its pacified junta.

Yet today’s “Christians” go all over the world teaching what their 501-c-3 captive status won’t allow spoken from the church pulpit, proving again that plundering Inca temples and crusading abroad indicates too much leisure among those who will not see the myriad challenges at home.

Chancellor Rudolf Hess parachuting into Scotland only to have his regime’s appeal kept from the British people and spend 46 years incommunicado behind bars, dying in prison. This story the media munchkins may not touch.

Germany’s inability to outshout such a cacophony presaged the more recent Jews Of All The World United In Action against (nonexistent, except Israel’s) Weapons Of Mass Destruction, false flaggings whereby Serbia, Iraq, Afghanistan, Libya, Syria and Kuwait, among other formerly sovereign States, now experience what laid waste the splendid cultural city of Dresden.

But because we can’t beat them doesn’t suggest joining the claptrap actions those More Equals want all the world united in, for noncooperation is precisely where our recovery begins. This long train of abuses isn’t unusual; history shows that wherever the permanent conspiracy takes charge of any regime’s accounts, more excesses soon follow than decent people can suffer. How fast they’ll isolate it back within the pale? Depends on whether you’re talking about those extremely patient Orientals, northern Slavics having shorter fuses or American pioneers, the unpredictable factor in what’s otherwise a reliable equation.

Our great advantage

God and truth are proprietary neither to us nor others exclusively, notwithstanding Chosenite self-deceptions, as either or both sides can pray during a conflict of interests imagined or real. So one mustn’t claim the enemy is devoid of divine guidance or faith in his own tribe’s teachings; it’s just that we fight aboveboard while he wages war by deception. All governments mimic and contribute to nature’s balance, necessarily entering into symbiotic relationships as do many lower life unions patently suggesting our States’ mutual benefit confederations,
